Circuit Court.

J. Hillegas was tried by the recorder's court of Canby and found guilty of selling intoxicating liquors on Sunday and sentenced to pay a fine of $50, or in default to be committed to the city jail.

The judgment of the recorder's court was reviewed by the circuit court and the proceedings dismissed, as the charter prohibited selling spirituous, malt and vinous liquors saying nothing about intoxicating liquors. Judge McBride held that intoxicating liquors was a much broader term than malt, vinous and spirituous liquors and that the charge of selling the former would not support a conviction where the breach could only be for selling the latter.

The question as to whether the legislature had provided a court for Canby was raised also. The judge held that a court for Canby was created by implication as the charter directed that the recorder should report all fines collected by him for prosecutions in his court and the ordinance provided that violations of it should be prosecuted before the recorder.

AN INTERESTING DECISION.

Justice McNulty Passes Upon the Exemption of a Debtor.

A case recently before the justice court brings up a question peculiarly of interest to Oregon City. A young man, working in one of the mills, was in debt and the creditor brought garnishment proceedings. The debtor employed Attorney Brownell to fight the case on the ground that a portion of his salary went toward the support of a family and he was therefore exempt. He contended that the exemption law, which is Mr. Brownell's own law, applied to all persons whose wages are given for the support of a family, whether he is the head of the family or not. The contention of the plaintiff was that the exemption law applied only to the heads of families.

The law says that the wages of a personal debtor are exempt from attachment, garnishment or execution when it appears that the wages are necessary for the use of a family, supported wholly or in part by the wages of the debtor.

Judge McNulty, after taking the case under advisement, found for the defendant.

KIDNAPPED HER GRANDSON.

Mrs. Thomas Laws Arrested on Complaint of A. M. Lovelace.

A warrant was issued in the justice court Monday afternoon for the arrest of Mrs. Thomas Laws on the charge of kidnapping her 9-year-old grandson, A. M. Lovelace, of Damascus, the boy's maternal grandfather, who had charge of the boy during the absence of his mother in Rossland, B. C.

About ten years ago John Laws, of Oregon City and Lillian Lovelace, were married and four years later were divorced, Mrs. Laws being granted the custody of the child, and when she went to Rossland she left her son in her father's care.

Mr. Lovelace says that Mrs. Thomas Laws desired to have her grandson visit her over the Fourth of July and her request was granted, and Lovelace states the boy was sent to his father in California, without the consent of the lawful guardians. The boy's mother arrived from British Columbia Saturday evening to pay a visit to her son and was grieved to learn of his disappearance.

Constable Moody arrested Mrs. Thomas Laws Tuesday morning and she was released on her own recognizance. The hearing has been set for Saturday.

Polk Miller is the best delineator of the old Southern Plantation Negro that has ever appeared on the public stage, and in his description of his "boyhood's happy days down on the farm," he introduces the most side-splitting stories, and reproduces in a realistic manner, those old plantation melodies, accompanied by the banjo, and gives the very best opportunity of hearing the pure negro dialect from one who knows it, not from study nor from reading it, but from having been in contact with the race all his life.
