Voices of the Sea.

"What are the wild waves saying?" -Song.

"The deep uttered his voice," -Habakkuk.

To him that dwells beside the sea, His heart in loving sympathy With all its moods, such speech it bath— Now sad, now gay, in love or wrath—

As wind-swept harp or organ tone, Drawn forth by a master's hand alone. Sweet was the air, the sunshine bright, When first I beheld the sea;

And the laughing, rattling foam-wreathed waves Sang a welcome, a welcome to me. "O, life is a joy!

See how we play, Gleefully dancing The liveliest day. List to our music! Often we smile, Bunkissed to beauty, Singing the while

O life repeats itself o'er and o'er, Just as the waves break on the shore; Sunlight and shadow upon it fall, As the sky blue or gray bends over all."

While I pace the beach in the chill of morn, In each cold, cruel wave a voice seems born, Whose tones have a cadence sad.

"O, what is life but a treacherous sea Between earth and far off eternity? 'Tis a trackless waste, so vast and wide, With the ebb and flow of a varying tide,

And little to make one glad!" "O, what is it for, this merciless sea, Of wrecking the hopes of humanity,

Casting them dead ashore, Why must we buffet its salt, and waves, Which, leaping, threaten to make our graves With many gone down before?"

Come a voice, stealing Over me, kneeling Where the heart-beats of ocean sound; All the air is calm, With a healing balm,

As the glory of sunset falls around. "The sea is His, and He made it Mysterious, solemn, grand; Its bounds He set; its tides are held In the hollow of His hand

His purposes vast unfolding Through the ages long gone by, Reveal the power of the Infinite Who knows the how and why."

So, lingering here till the midnight, Moon and stars looking down from above, Humanity seems but an atom In God's universe of love.

BRITISH BANKRUPTS.

PRIVILEGES WHICH ARE ACCORDED BY LAW TO PEERS.

Some English Legal Decisions as to What Constitute the Necessaries of Life—They Widely Differ From Duke to Ordinary Mortal.

Recent bankruptcy cases in London have brought up various legal decisions which have been reached in England on the subject of what are necessities of life for men of various stations and degrees who are not in command of their own incomes.

A duke, for instance, or even a marquise or an earl is entitled by law to one bottle of champagne a day if his trustees hold the money to pay for it. In the case of the former Duke of Manchester the law decided that seven bottles of champagne a week are necessary to a duke whose affairs may be in the hands of trustees and that if he had not the control of his own income he must be allowed to have a carriage with one horse, a riding horse as well, one manservant and a house with a rent of not less than £250 a year; otherwise he must be allowed to have the use of £2,000 a year, while the rest might be allowed to accumulate for the good of the estate till the trustee period expired.

A viscount or a baron is allowed by law to describe as necessities things which smaller fry might struggle along without. But a viscount's income—provided there is anybody to pay it—is fixed at £1,500 a year and a baron's at £1,000. He is, supposing any guardians have a few thousands a year to pay out to him according to discretion, only entitled to claret as a beverage, for his yearly wine allowance only runs to £60, which would not keep him in champagne unless he drank it very seldom. The duke's wine bill may run to £150.

The viscount must have a carriage, but it may be attached for debt, and he cannot force his guardians to give him a horse. Of course, if he has no guardians, nor any income, either, he must do as other people and go without, but these things are considered necessary to peers. A manservant is allowed to a viscount or baron, but the house rent need not exceed £200, nor can it be less than £150.

A doctor is better off than a viscount in one way—his carriage cannot be seized in most cases, nor can the expenses of it be reckoned in his income tax returns. In selling up a doctor for debt he may retain one horse, and two of his carpets are considered as necessities to his business—in the hall and consulting room—and reckoned at £20 apiece. He may have surgical instruments and medical appliances to the value of £1,000, and these cannot be seized.

An ordinary man can retain nothing but his clothes, his hairbrushes and a few stern necessities of that kind. No wine is allowed to a doctor, but if a student in the hands of trustees, he can demand a couple of servants and a house rent of £60 per year.

The son of a well to do merchant or tradesman making about £1,000 a year can demand neither wine nor horses nor servants, but the law may allow him a rent of £50 and another £150 or £200 to keep himself on, supposing he is in the hands of guardians, whether under or over age. As to debt, he can be sold up, but his personal necessities and his clothes, though he is not generally allowed to keep more than six suits of the latter.

If he has more a judge might allow them to be taken with the other chattels, and he can be left without a chair to sit on or a spoon to eat with. Jewelry, if he has any, can be taken; but if he has, say, two pairs of valuable sleeve links he can keep only one of them. In the same way he may keep a dress suit, but if he has two an order may be made to sell up one of them.

A lawyer can have 500 books on legal subjects or in some way pertaining to law, and these have to be left alone by the brokers. There are extreme cases in which everything, even necessities, may be taken, but the lawyer may also demand exemption even in such cases for his wife, or at least two of them, and two gowns. As a student in the hands of guardians he can make them pay him £80 a year for chambers, and they must pay his examination and other fees.

A clergyman or minister of any kind is worst off of all and can keep very little for himself. He can make his guardians come down with the fees his profession needs, however, and if he lives in the country as a curate and has some trustees and also a guardian he can make them supply him with a gardener.

Why She Wept.

Among the Malmotes, descendants of the Spartans, thieving is considered a very honorable employment. An English traveler, being entertained at the house of one of the mountaineers, took some silver articles from a packing case he had with him to eat his dinner with.

"What were they?" she replied, "I weep because my son is not here to rob you of those beautiful things!"

No Gentlemen.

"Mame," said the girl in the red shirt waist and plaid skirt, "ain't he just a prince?" "Oh, rats!" replied her lady friend, with dignity, "Any one kin see that he wears a celloid collar, and them trousers is $3 ones."—Philadelphia North American.

Nasal Catarrh quickly yields to treatment by Ely's Cream Balm, which is agreeably aromatic. It is resolved through the nostrils, cleanses and heals the whole surface over which it diffuses itself.

Announcement. To accommodate those who are partial to the use of atomizers in applying liquids into the nasal passages for colored treatments, the proprietors prepare Cream Balm in liquid form, which will be known as Ely's Liquid Cream Balm. Price including the spraying tube 75 cents.

Betraying Buckles. General Dubesme was a distinguished French veteran, slain by the Prussians after the rout of Waterloo. He was full of resource and had great skill and presence of mind.

"Who commands at Pescara?" he asked a soldier. "There are two." "What is the grade of the chief in command?" "A brigadier general." "His name?" "De Pietramaggiore."

An Excuse For a Pardon. When the stern Duke of Wellington was prime minister under George IV, he managed the old monarch easily enough, but when he attempted the same tactics with the young Queen Victoria he met his match.

Perambulating Goat Dairies. There are a couple of European dairies in Athens whose proprietors keep cows, but they do business mostly with the foreigners and with those Greeks who ape foreign manners.

How Do You Pronounce "Dog"? How do you pronounce "dog"? The chances are that, if you are an average Massachusetts citizen, you pronounce the "o" rather broad, like "o" in song.

My Hog and My Dog. [A lesson in pronunciation.] I once owned a roving hog And likewise a little dog, Whom I chained unto a log To keep him from a hog Which was near.
