She is the daughter of Mr. T. M. Baker, a leading citizen of Pleasant Hill. The details of the horrible affair are as follows:

Saturday afternoon Miss Baker went from her home to visit Mrs. Jones, a neighbor, and started to return about two o'clock. While passing some heavy timber a man jumped out of the brush into the road, seized Miss Baker and assaulted her. She struggled frantically in her endeavor to escape and though her clothes were almost entirely torn off, she was finally successful. Reacting home in an exhausted condition she managed to tell what had happened, then lost consciousness. Dr. Rickard, of Sperwood, was called in, but late baturday evening the girl was in a critical condition.

A posse of 2 men started at once to the scene of the outrage but were unable to locate the rullian. They found the place where the scuttle had occurred and darkness came on and he escaped with would mean an additional value to the the night. The roads were guarded all
