He Was No Hero.

"Well," said the doctor, peering into the room where Wellington Frash, the great poker expert, was waiting for the return, "I suppose you will regard this as a mere formality, but I must congratulate you nevertheless on the fact that you have a fine boy across the hall."

"Hi!" said Mr. Frash. "That's good! Come in and take something." "Excuse me for a moment," the doctor replied. Presently he returned, put his head into Mr. Frash's den and said: "Let me congratulate you again. You have two fine boys across the hall."

Mr. Frash opened his mouth as if in reply, but before he could do so the doctor was gone again. Presently he bounded in the new doctor's presence, saying: "By George, you have three fine boys across the hall!"

He was starting back when Mr. Frash hurried forward, grasped him by the shoulder and in excited tones cried: "Say, doc, hold on. Three of a kind are good enough for me. I stand pat." —Chicago Herald.

The Earthquake.

To the average resident of the temperate zones an earthquake is a rare and terrible event, creating more consternation than any other visitation of nature. In the tropics, however, particularly in Central America, it is wonderful how easily the residents become accustomed to these shocks, which do not come, however, wholly without warning.

You are sitting on a piazza on a hot afternoon chatting with your friends when suddenly the sky seems to grow hazy and the crows stop cawing. There is a general rush, and though you may not know what is the matter, you cannot help feeling uneasy.

The old natives say, "We're going to have a little shake," and then the house begins to rock, the tumbler fall off the table, you feel drazily sick at the stomach, and the thing is all over. The sky clears, the crows begin their noisy screams, and things are soon put right again.

The Chances in Policy.

The retired "poke" shopkeeper was explaining to his interested brood some of the mysteries of his former business.

"The chances of winning at the policy game," he said, "are about like this: You take a bushel basket and fill it with small white beans. Then you put one small black bean into the basket and shake the lot up. After that go to some 'skyscraper' building, my one about 29 stories high, and place a penny on the sidewalk in front of it. This done, shoulder your bushel of beans and take the elevator to the roof of the building. Then lean over the edge of the roof and, aiming at the cent on the sidewalk below, dump out the beans in the basket all together. Then hurry down on the elevator and rush out to the sidewalk. If you find that the black bean has fallen upon the penny, you win." —New York Times.

The Stillest Birds.

Dodo is the Portuguese name for simpton, and it is given to the stillest bird that ever lived. Three hundred years ago, when the Portuguese first visited the island of Mauritius, they found a large number of these birds. They were about the size of a large swan, blackish gray in color and having only a bunch of feathers in place of a tail and little, useless wings. More stupid and foolish birds could not be imagined. They ran about making a silly, hissing noise like a goose, and the sailors easily knocked them over with their paddles. They couldn't fly, they couldn't swim, they couldn't run at any great speed, and as for fighting, they were the greatest cowards in the world. They were not too stupid to build a nest, and so they dropped an egg and went off to let it hatch as best it could.

A Patti Satire.

During one of Adeline Patti's last tours in the United States, the following preliminary notice was published by a western editor:

Mrs. Patti Nicollin, the emmett vocalist and farewellist, will come to us for positively the last time yet before the year after next will do well to bear the human nightingale on this trip. For Patti never says goodby twice in the same year, and so do without bearing her strike her big two thousand dollar note is to seek the hereafter in woeful ignorance of the heights to which a woman with good lungs, a castle in Wales and who only uses one kind of soap can soar when she tries."

Most Satisfying.

They were speaking of the billowaire's insufferable pretensions. "Upon what ment does this our Caesar feed that he has grown so great?" exclaimed Mordant bitterly. "Mint's meat, possibly!" observed Meltraers, trying to be cheaply witty while yet preserving the easy grace of a man of the world. —Detroit Free Press.

Tactful.

Mrs. Nosepoke—John, don't you think it's about time for us to call on our new neighbors? Husband—Why, they only moved in this morning.

Mrs. Nosepoke—Oh, I know, but all their stuff will be downstairs and I can see it better. —Ohio State Journal.

Requiescent In Pace.

"He thought the gun wasn't loaded." "But it really was loaded!" "After he found it out it wasn't!" —Philadelphia Press.

The first book printed in Minnesota was a Bible. It was printed in 1836, about 13 years before the first issue of a newspaper in St. Paul.
