THE STIRRUP CUP.

My short and happy day is done; The long and lonely night comes on, and at my door the pale borse stands To carry me to unknown lands.

His whinny shrill, his pawing boof, Sound dreadful as a gathering storm, And I must leave this sheltering roof - And Joys of life so soft and warm.

Tender and warm the joys of life; Good friends, the faithful and the true; My rosy children and my wife, So sweet to kiss, so fair to view.

So sweet to kim, so fair to view; e night comes on, the lights burn blue d at my door the pale horse stands To bear me forth to unknown lands.

A NOVEL HOTEL BILL.

The Man to Whom It Was Presented Could Not Understand It.

"Talking about bookkeeping, there used to be a man in Yankton whose system of bookkeeping accounts was wonderfully efficient. He kept a hotel, and he could neither read nor write. He did not know how to spell his own name, but he did a thriving business and collected every dollar of his accounts. Once, years ago, when I first came to this country, I went to his hotel and stopped there two weeks," writes Milt Brinben.

"When I left, he presented me with a statement of what I owed him, and it was a curiosity. He had copied it from his ledger. At the top of the sheet there was a rude pleture of a soldier on the march and after it three straight marks. Then there was a scene showing a man at table eating. Then appeared a bed with a man in it. In the amount column there was a picture of a doll and after it the two letters "RS." After the picture of a man eating there were forty-two marks; after the view of the man in the bed, fourteen marks. I looked at the account, then at the proprietor, and told him it would take me a week to answer that conundrum.

"I was completely stumped, and when that hotel man deciphered the amount for me it was this: The picture of the soldler walking meant march, and the three marks supplied the date. March 3, when I began boarding. The man at the table with forty-two marks after It indicated that I had eaten forty-two ments. The man in bed with fourteen marks showed that I had slept in the house fourteen nights. The doll with the 'RS' after it meant 'dollars,' and in the figure columns appeared the figures 14, which was the amount I owed him. And it was a true bill."-Yankton Press.

A Persian Barber.

Strange Lapse of Memory.

Cases of forgetfulness on matters of Interest are on record. While Dr. Priestley was preparing his work entitled "Harmony of the Gospels" he had taken great pains to inform himself on a subject which had been under discussion relative to the Jewish Passover. He wrote out the result of his researches and laid the paper away. His attention and time being taken with something else, some little time elapsed before the subject occurred to his mind again. Then the same time and pains were given to the subject that had been given to it before, and the results were again put on paper and laid aside. So completely had he forgotts : that he had copled the same paragraphs and reflections before that it was only when he had found the papers on which he had transcribed them that it was recalled to his recollection. This same author had frequently read his own published writings and did not recognize them.

A QUESTION OF TEETH. Did the Immortal George Wear Artificial or Natural Owest "George Washington's false teeth, which were supposed to have been made of lvory, are giving a certain class of freak historians about as much trouble as they must have given the venerable patriot who wore them," said one of the professors of the Smithsonian institution to a reporter recently.

"Many times a year for several years this institution has been called upon to produce these mysterious teeth for the inspection of persons who insist that they are here.

"Our matter of fact answer to these inquiries that Washington had no false teeth, or at least if he did, that they are not in the possession of the museum, seems only to stimulate the inquiring mind to protest our statement. They proceed to give us authentic accounts of these teeth and always conclude with expressing the belief that they must be in the museum some-

"Where or how the idea that Washington had false teeth originated is an unsolved mystery. That it is firmly believed by many is certainly a fact. There seems to be no authentic record of the Father of His Country possessing ivory teeth, and by a study of the bust we have of him, which was made but a few years before his death, there is no indication of an indentation along the line of the gums such as can be noticed in persons who have had their teeth drawn, even though they wear artificial ones. However, we will continue to answer the same question in the same way probably many times in the future."

According to some biographers Washington lost his teeth during his service as commander in chief of the Continental army and had a set of lvory ones made. These teeth, it is also stated, gave him much trouble because they did not fit.-Washington

Paying a Creditor.

Like many another famous man both before his time and since, Talleyrand exhibited, at least in early life, a great reluctance to settling with his creditors. When he was appointed bishop of Autun by Louis XVI., he considered a fine new coach to be necessary to the proper maintenance of the dignity of that office. Accordingly a coach was ordered and delivered, but not paid for, Some time after, as the newly appointed bishop was about to enter his conch. he noticed a strange man standing near who bowed continually until the coach. was driven away. This occurred for several days until at length Talleyrand, addressing the stranger, said: "Well, my good man, who are you?"

"I am your conchmaker, my lord." replied the stranger.

"Ah," said Talleyrand, "you are fay coachmaker! And what do you want, my coachmaker?"

"I want to be pald, my lord."

"Ah, you are my conchmaker, and you want to be paid? You shall be paid, my conchmaker."

"But when, my lord?" "Hum," said Talleyrand, settling himself comfortably among the cushtons of his new coach and eying his conclimater severely, "you are very inquisitive!"
