On Wednesday the union met and a the play repeated. The Telford relief committee was appointed. Emes played between acts. The ployes of the paper mills offered to contribute all funds necessary for the prosecution of the strike and for the aid of The cast of characters follows: those desiring assistance. Several busimiler, Keeper of Fairpoint Light ness men also offered assistance. The made by the conference committee,

"We, the committee appointed to confer with the president of the Oregon City Manufacturing Company, beg to submit the following as our side of the case:

"While we were in consultation at the mill office, the manager accused us of taking anap judgment, without giving a moment's notice. This we will not sleny, but in return we accuse them of taking snap judgment also by demanding of the plain weavers that they run two looms each or get out. This act we can prove by at least three reliable witnesses, although the company flatly denies this statement.

"When this committee was with them, they told us the cassimers weavers could return to work, and they did not care whether the plain weavers came to work or not, and that if we did not like that we could quit.

"They say that we always received courteous treatment so far as the officers of the company are concerned. This we readily admit, But when it comes to some of the foremen, that is another question. It is a positive fact that some of the hands are treated like Chinamen. They well know by past experience that if they report the matter to the office it means immediate dismissal, or a change to a class of work that they cannot "make salt" on. The office is not responsible for this, and may not know of it.

The River and Harbor Bill is before the Senate Committee of Commerce, of which Senator Mitchell is a member. He has successfully exerted himself to convince the Committee of the needs of Oregon, so that they have agreed to report in favor of increasing several items; Coos Bay will be reported at $75,000 instead of $10,000, and the Siuslaw $38,-000, instead of $26,000.
