GOOD FOR OREGON

Praises Sung for Our State By Eastern People.

QUALITY OF STOCK A SURPRISE

No Limit to the Possibilities in Agricultural Pursuits in Our Good State.

Eastern livestock men of national reputation, who were in attendance upon the sessions of the State Fair at Salem this fall declare that Oregon livestock is equal in quality to any in the country.
They suggest, however, that there should be more of the high-class stock, and recommend as a means of accomplishing this end that the best sires be obtained to place at the head of Oregon herds.
The men who have paid the high commitment to Oregon cattle, sheep and hogs are recognized as authorities on these subjects, and their opinions are worthy the careful attention of Oregon farmers who hesitate to engage in the growing of stock or to improve their herds.

N. H. Gentry, a prominent cattle-breeder of Sedalia, Mo., visited the Oregon State Fair, where he judged the beef cattle and swine. He is president of the Missouri State Fair Board, president of the American Berkshire Association and a director in the American Shorthorn Association. He is also a member of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Commission which had charge of Missouri's exhibit at the World's Fair at Chicago. In speaking of his observations at the State Fair he said:

The quality of the livestock at the fair was first class and I do not hesitate to say that I saw some cattle as good as can be found anywhere in the East. There were also some splendid Berkshires—as good as were exhibited at the International Livestock Exposition at Chicago last year, and the Berkshires were as good as any that were there.

I also saw some fine displays of sheep, and, judging by the remarkably healthy condition of the sheep, I should say that this must be a good sheep country. The thrifty appearance of the wool and the good gloss it bore particularly attracted my attention. The excellent quality of the stock that came under my special inspection seemed to be representative of the character of all kinds of stock on exhibition at the fair. In point of quality Oregon breeders are up with the Eastern breeders. But the quantity of the high-class stock is far too limited here in this state.

"My time did not permit me to examine the agricultural exhibits very closely, but I notice that you raise splendid wheat, probably superior to that raised anywhere in the East. I am surprised that the farmers sell so much of it at the low prices instead of feeding it to stock.
Wheat and oats mixed and ground into chop make the best kind of feed. I am told that buyers do not encourage farmers to fatten their cattle on grain, but I believe that if the farmers adopt this method of feeding they will find that packers will pay a better price for the beef, and that the feeding will pay.
Packing houses are being established all over the West and you will soon have one here.

"In the uniformity of this climate and the luxuriant growth of grasses the Oregon farmers have a great advantage over those of the Eastern States, where there are cold winters and hot summers.
The Oregon farmers can fatten their cattle on much less grain than can the Eastern farmer, because of the more favorable climate and better grass production.

"I have been impressed with the depth and richness of your soil, but understand that in the older portions of the state the soil refuses to produce the enormous crops it did a few years ago. The Oregon farmer must learn, as we have in Missouri, that land will not stand the continual production of one crop. Farmers should not wait until their land is worn out before they abandon the old methods, but by rotating their crops and pasturing they should keep the soil rich.
The great grain-producing states are becoming stock-producing states, and I predict that Oregon will become one of the best livestock states in the country."

Professor W. L. Carlyle, of the chair of animal husbandry at the University of Wisconsin, was judge of dairy cattle, draft horses and sheep at Oregon State Fair. In speaking of the livestock exhibits he said:

"So far as the representation at the fair shows the quality of Oregon livestock, this state has as excellent cattle and sheep as can be found anywhere in the United States. The Jerseys in particular cannot be excelled, but I think it will be agreed that there should be greater numbers of these splendid dairy cattle. I saw a few that were not in as good condition as they should be. The Holsteins were not largely represented, but what there were were exceedingly fine.
The Ayrshires are a breed that I think very highly of, and I saw some very good animals at the fair, but none up to the standard of Eastern breeders. There was a fine herd of brown Swiss cattle, which I judge should do well in the mountainous sections of Oregon. Being natives of Switzerland, they are a strong, rugged type, and do well under conditions where the more refined herds would not thrive. In dual-purpose breeds there were three herds exhibited. The red poll cattle are growing to be popular in the Middle West, and very justly so.

They are low, blocky cattle, of uniform size, and showing good milking qualities.
The steers are in great favor for beef purposes when well grown.

"The sheep exhibit was a complete surprise to me in its high quality. I think that at none of the Eastern state fairs will as good an exhibit of Cotswold sheep be found. The growth of wool was particularly fine, and demonstrated that this country, in so far as wool production is concerned, cannot be excelled in the United States. Not a single poor sheep was shown, though there were four large exhibits. The Shropshire breed was well represented, but the animals were not of such uniformly high character as the Cotswolds. The development of the lambs of this class was noteworthy, as it was in all others. This seems to indicate that Oregon should prove a very formidable rival of England in the future, and I can see no reason why Eastern breeders should not get their exhibit stock from the Pacific Coast instead of going to England for it.

With the long hard winters which we have to contend with in the Middle West, it is very difficult to grow lambs and young sheep in the greatest perfection in the first year, and for this reason exhibitors import their show stock from England. So soon as Oregon breeders take hold of the matter as they should, I believe they can challenge the world in the production of high-class sheep.

"I am taking some samples of wool to Wisconsin University for exhibition purposes in the classroom, as I have never found its equal in length of staple and strength of fiber.

"In company with Colonel Judson we spent the day in the Willamette valley, viewing representative farm scenes. I am delighted with the conditions I have found, and especially with the many advantages for the successful growing of livestock. All this state needs to make it the greatest livestock section of the United States is an awakening of the farmers to the wonderful natural advantages they possess, and to the necessity for a constant supply of good food for stock throughout the entire year.

"There is evidence on every hand that the farmers are very lax in their methods of breeding, and especially that they neglect to procure the very best of sires to head their flocks and herds. The best is none too good for Oregon."

CROP BULLETIN.

Recent Rains Were Beneficial to Crops and Pastures.

The past week was cool, with several good rains in the western section of the state. In the eastern section the rainfall was light and badly distributed. Frosts occurred on several mornings, but they did no damage of consequence.

The grain crop is being rapidly hauled to the warehouses and is now practically all threshed. Hop picking is finished and the crop, although lighter than expected earlier in the season, is a good one, and of excellent quality. Prune drying is in active progress, with variable yields, which are generally reported as light.

The rains have started a new growth of grass and fall pasturage is rapidly improving. Range stock, as a rule, are not in as good a condition as usual at this season of the year. Potato digging has been and the tubers, while not large, are generally of good quality; the yield will be below the average. Late potatoes have been greatly benefited by the recent rains. Corn and apples are the principal crops yet to be harvested.

Corn was injured by the frosts of last week, but this week the weather was more favorable and it is probable very nearly an average crop will be secured.
More rain is needed for fall plowing and for fall seeding on summer-fallow land.

OREGON'S EXHIBIT

A Display of Products at Chicago Fair.

LIGHT EXPENSE IS ATTACHED

The State Will Never Have a Better Chance to Advertise Its Resources.

Permanent exhibits of Oregon's resources will be displayed in Chicago and other large cities, where they will advertise this state to the best advantage.
The idea originated with W. E. Coman, of the Southern Pacific, who will receive the co-operation of Immigration Agent McKinney, of the Harriman lines, as well as of the leading industrial workers of Oregon.

Some of the exhibits at the state fair have been secured for the permanent display to be established in a prominent part of Chicago. Secretary G. H. Lamberson, of the state board of horticulture, has secured the exhibit of the Corvallis Agricultural College for advertising Oregon. Part of it will be turned over to Mr. Coman for the eastern permanent exhibit. J. B. Douglas, of Linn county, has promised to send a good representative exhibit of that county for the same purpose.

Mr. McKinney writes Mr. Coman that he has secured a good sized space at Peoria for an exhibit at a big industrial show to be given there soon. Mr. Com-man will endeavor to get enough exhibits to make a good showing for Oregon. The exhibits will then be used for the permanent exhibit in Chicago and other cities. These proposed permanent exhibits give Oregon counties a chance to advertise their resources in the most far-reaching manner. Every county in the state would find it an advantage to send a good representative exhibit to Mr.
Coman, or to the State Board of Horticultural headquarters. The advertising literature which many of the counties are now preparing would thus be illustrated in a practical manner. A like opportunity would not again present itself.

The boards of trade or commercial organizations of the cities of the individual counties could easily co-operate and appropriate enough money for a good representative exhibit which would do the counties untold good. In such cases the burden would fall very light upon the people at large, and all industrial lines would be made to boom by reason of the influx of settlers. Industrial workers say that the people were never given such a chance to advertise the resources of their respective districts so cheaply.
Even if a small percentage of the growers in the different counties would have a few of their best samples, an exhibit would be gathered that would be a credit to Oregon, and be the means of developing its resources in the most rapid manner. For instance, it would be very little trouble and scarcely any expense for every farmer in the state to save one sample of his best product and send it to Portland for exhibition purposes. It would result in a first-class display, which would show the world the richness and extent of Oregon's resources. The same thing applies to other industrial lines.

Forty Years' Torture.
