THE PRESIDENT'S TOUR.

For many reasons it is unfortunate that the recent injury to President Roosevelt has resulted in a condition which has compelled him to cancel all the remaining engagements of his tour and to return to Washington. It disappoints hundreds of thousands of people in half a score of states who looked forward to his visit with keen pleasure. It deprives himself of the delight which he always feels in mingling with his countrymen. It gives a chance to the critics of all presidental tours to write further homilies in favor of the isolation of the country's chief magistrates. Moreover, it may give rise to fears, which undoubtedly would be unjustified, that the physicians in this case, as in that of President McKinley, may have been astray in their diagnosis, and that his real condition is worse than they divulge.

While it would seem that the President's physicians ought to have grasped the situation a few days earlier, and have vetoed this tour from the beginning, it is gratifying to the country to know that he is not in the slightest danger. He is merely compelled to submit to inactivity for a few days, but to a man of his abounding exuberance this will be decidedly unpleasant. His robustness and vitality will protect him against any serious consequences, and bring him out soon again with renewed strength and with added zest for the duties and responsibilities of his post, social as well as official. No president has physically been better able to withstand the effects of such injuries as those which afflict Col. Roosevelt at the present moment, though, of course, none would be more grieved than he at anything which would deprive his countrymen of a chance to see him whenever they desired.

Probably this means that neither the West nor any other part of the country will have a chance to see the president again this year. By the time that he fully recovers from the effects of his injuries the meeting of Congress will be only a few weeks away, and this will compel him to remain in Washington for the season. President Roosevelt, in the year in which he has been in the White House has traveled more than any other president did in four years, and he has made more addresses, long and short, than any other president did in eight years. He has mingled, and loves to mingle, with all sorts and conditions of men. Personally, he is one of the most broadly popular men who were ever in the presidency. He is an American whose Americanism has no limitation of party or geographical lines. To paraphrase Jefferson's words at his first inauguration, President Roosevelt's countrymen feel, when he is with them, that "we are all democrats, we are all republicans." In a few days or weeks the president will be himself again, but probably the dictates of intelligent caution, coupled with pressing official duties, will keep him in Washington for several months.

COLD CONSOLATION.

There may be consolation in the editorial remarks of the Oregonian concerning the results of the recent fires in this county. Perhaps twenty or twenty-five years from now the events of the past few weeks will be forgotten and to the rising generation there will be some good effects experienced, but how about those persons who now are approaching old age and are rendered homeless and almost destitute by their loses? They will never in any way experience anything but regrets at their misfortune. The paragraph reads:

"It is the opinion of timber-cruisers of experience, who have visited the scenes of the late forest fires in Multnomah and Clackamas counties, that the large trees were not injured for milling purposes by the blaze that swept through them. The food for the flames was mostly farmers' slashings, undergrowth, fences, houses and barns. If this be true, the damage caused by the fire will be much less than at first estimated. The stress upon farmers burned out of house and home is not lessened by this fact, though a few years will make good the losses and add to the value of the fire-swept lands."

This seems to us to be the coldest kind of consolation. To our way of thinking the losses sustained, by reason of damaged timber is quite insignificant when it comes to a question of being deprived of the homes that have required the most diligent effort for a quarter of a century to build.

HERE'S TO EXPANSION.

A very old joke is reported to have come true at Danbury, Conn., the other night when Mr. Elbert Thayer's barn containing a ten-acre crop ot popcorn caught fire. Mr. Thayer and his family were awakened by a series of explosions, and on looking toward the barn they beheld flames leaping up from a large white hill that was where the barn had once been. It was at first supposed that a snow covered volcano had suddenly come into existence where no volcano had been before, but the truth soon became apparent. It was the popcorn, which kept popping away and adding to the height of the great mound beneath which the ruins of the barn were buried.

It is said that the roof of the barn, which was forced off by the popcorn, within, was found in another township, and one of the barn doors is still supposed to be sailing around somewhere in space.

These facts merely go to prove that truth continues to make fiction haunt the dark caves; also that it is hard to stop expansion after it gets a fair start. As for the veracity of the Connecticut people who witnessed this wonderful demonstration by Nature's pent-up forces, how can we question it? Connecticut is the home of truthfulness and wooden nutmegs.

Young Teddy Roosevelt, while on his way from his Dakota hunting trip, passed an hour in Dowagiac. It is gratifying to be assured on the authority of the Dowagiac Republican that Teddy was found to be "of strong personality, well informed and easily approached," which tends to allay apprehension. There had existed some misgiving concerning his approachability since he filled the clothes of one of the hunting party full of quail shot a couple of weeks ago. The approach of Teddy is, after all, not a dangerous matter, as he is understood to be really not savage, but to approach and get safely away—ay, there's the rub.

Brother Cheney and his esteemed Courier must have experienced a very unsatisfatctory time of it last week. He had a general blowing off all around, and undoubtedly feels greatly relieved. But then, Friend Cheney is subject to those spells, and not being of sufficient caliber to inflict serious damage, his utterances are passed by as coming from a brain in a worse condition than a disordered stomach.

If there are any such who are inclined to question the efficacy of advertising, we cheerfully recommend that they forthwith interview the physician who is waiting upon the president.

Peary says he could discover the north pole if he had $200,000. But if he had $200,000 why should he ever want to do anything as disagreeable as discovering the pole?

PRE-HISTORIC RELICS WANTED.

Department of Archaeology Recently Established at Phillips Academy.

To the Editor:—Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., has recently established a Department of Archaeology. My object in writing you is to encourage the preservation of stone, bone and clay prehistoric art forms. In your section of the country are frequently found various "Indian relics." These have a direct bearing on the history—or rather prehistory—of America, and as such should be preserved in fire-proof buildings for the study and edification of present and future generations.

I am pursuaded that there may be persons who have found some remains of the ancient Indian tribes, "Mound builders," etc., and that, possibly, they would be willing to send them to us. We shall be glad to pay express charges on any and all boxes of specimens sent to us, to mention the gifts in our report and to gve the honors due credit in our exhibition cases.

All these axes, pipes, spears heads, clay vessels and "strange stones," should be carefully preserved somewhere, where they may be of service to the public and to science. Archaeology — technically followed—is a new science in the United States and it is more important than the average reader imagines, for these "stone relics" have a direct bearing on the antiquity of man.

I shall be glad to correspond with persons who have "relics" in their possession. Thanking you, I am,

Yours very truly,
WARREN K. MOOREHEAD,
Curator.

Morgan Takes a Hand.

J. Pierpont Morgan is about to identify himself with the oil business in California, in company with wealthy associates. On October 11, or a few days later, surveyors will be put into the field and will run lines to the ocean from the Coaling, McKittrick, Sunset, Midday and Kern River fields, to determine by which route it is most feasible to transport oil to tidewater. The surveys will run over the Coast range at a number of points, and will also go down the San Joaquin Valley parallel with the line of the Standard. Upon the data so gathered will depend the location of the pipe line.

A company having a capitalization of $5,000,000 has been organized for this purpose, and this money will be devoted to the construction of lines, pumping stations, storage tanks and the like. Mr. Morgan and his associates have also formed a separate company, capitalized at $20,000,000, half of which sum will be invested in proven ground, and the other half turned into a reserve fund, not to be drawn upon until needed in the further purchase of real estate. It is stated that the Morgan syndicate will be prepared to handle 2,000,000 barrels the first year of its existence, and will increase that amount at the rate of 1,000,000 a year until the whole demand of the market is met. The papers for the new enterprise are now being drawn in New York.

The Worst Form.

Multitudes are singing the praises of Kodol, the new discovery which is making so many sick people well and weak people strong by digesting what they eat, by cleansing and sweetening the stomach and by transforming their food into the kind of pure, rich, red blood that makes you feel good all over. Mrs. Cranfill, of Troy, I. T., writes: For a number of years I was troubled with indigestion and dyspepsia which grew into the worst form. Finally I was induced to use Kodol and after using four bottles I am entirely cured. I heartily recommend Kodol to all sufferers from indigestion and dyspepsia. Take a dose after meals. It digests what you eat. G. A. Harding.

His Life In Peril.

"I just seem to have gone all to pieces," writes Alfred Bee, of Welfare, Tex., "billiousness and a lame back had made life a burden. I couldn't eat or sleep and felt almost too worn out to work when I began to use Electric Bitters,, but they worked wonders. Now I sleep like a top, can eat anything, have gained in strength, and enjoy hard work." They g.ve vigorous health and new life to weak, sickly, run-down people. Try them. Comet Grows Brighter.

Professor W. W. Campbell, of Lick Observatory, sends the following to the Associated Press:

"The comet discovered at Lick Observator., September 1, by Professor C. D. Perrine, has grown steadily brighter, as predicted, until at the present time it is visible to the naked eye. For the benefit of those who may care to observe it, I give its approximate position as follows:

"September 18, very close to the second magnitude star Alpha Cassiopeiae. It then enters upon the milky way, and after several days will not be readily detected.

"Upon the evening of October 6, it will be about three degrees north of Alpha Cygni. The comet should then be two or three times as bright as it is at present. It will then continue to move rapidly to the southwest, overtaking the sun early in November.
