State Senator Alex Sweek, of Portland, was in Oregon City last Friday, looking after legal matters at the land office. The story goes that Senator Sweek and others of Portland have recently been victimized by an alleged timber land locator, who received about $1400 from a party of speculators and then took unto himself a sudden leave of the city. The party is now endeavoring to learn whether it was timbered land, grazing land, or what not, that they were located on. The moral of such an experience is that people anxious to acquire timber land should consult reliable people.

Miss Mary Conyers, who has served in the capacity of bookkeeper in this office for over twelve years, resigned her position this week to enter more diligently upon the study of music and to further equip herself for office work. During her service in this establishment she has proven herself a most competent, careful and diligent employe, always subordinating her own desires or pleasures to the interests of the business. In her lately chosen work the good wishes of a large number of friends go with her, in which we join, realizing, as a matter of fact, that she will be successful, and to those who may employ her in future we heartily congratulate upon their good fortune, and cheerfully offer an earnest recommendation.
