THOS. TONGUE DEAD, Congressman of the First Judicial District, PASSES AWAY IN WASHINGTON, Remains Will be Brought to Oregon and Laid to Rest at Hillsboro.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, Jan. 11.—Representative Thomas H. Tongue, of the First Oregon Congressional District, in the presence of his daughter Bertha and his secretary, Miss Roane, died suddenly in his room at the Irvington, in this city, at 12:50 this afternoon.

The physicians who were summoned, and the family physician, Dr. Bove, as well as the coroner, agreed that death was due to acute indigestion, which superinduced paralysis of the heart.

Career of Thomas H. Tongue, Thomas H. Tongue, who had attained state prominence long before he became a National figure, was born in England on June 23, 1844.

When the House committee on rivers and harbors was out here a year ago, Mr. Tongue accompanied the members on their trip up and down the Columbia and gave them the necessary information about the needed improvements.

THE LEGISLATURE, George C. Brownell President of the Senate, WON AFTER A BITTER FIGHT, L. T. Harris, of Engen, Made Speaker of the House—Clackamas County Well Represented.

CHAMBERLAIN IS GOVERNOR, Wednesday Was a Gala Day at Salem and the Ceremonies Inspiring.

SALEM, Or., Jan. 15.—George E. Chamberlain, democrat, became governor of Oregon today, and Theodore T. Geer retired after four years of service.

Speaker Harris announced the joint committee to canvass the vote for governor, impartially choosing two democrats and two republicans.

The oath of office will be administered to the new governor by Chief Justice Moore," announced President Brownell.

At 3:15 o'clock the governor began, speaking rapidly and clearly and with much emphasis, upon the points he desired to impress particularly upon the attention of the legislature.

What was destined to be one of the most eventful days of the twenty-second biennial session of the Oregon Legislature, dawned fair and crisp over the capital city Monday and long ere the time for the convening of the two august legislative bodies the corridors of the stately edifices, which were spick and span in a brand new coat of spotless white paint, were thronged with an interested and expectant public.

It was a grand struggle and one which, while it was a clean-shaved victory for the Brownell-Fulton faction in the Senate, resulted in the complete collapse of two strong factions in the house of Representatives before the Harris-Fulton faction, yet it is venenously asserted by all who were engaged in the contest that, with possibly a few exceptions, the fight was a scrupulously clean one through-out and that the line of victory was clearly defined that each of the defeated candidates for the speakership can point out many instances in which they have achieved great victories over the other.

In the Senate it was only a two-sided fight with strength equally divided, twenty-two men in the caucus casting one ballot after another until fourteen successive ballots had been cast with the vote standing: eleven for Brownell, eleven for Smith, and one for Senator Steiwer, of Gilliam, Grant, Sherman, Wasco and Wheeler counties. This state of affairs continued for nine ballots before adjournment for lunch was taken and for five ballots after the caucus went into session again without the sign of a waver on anyone's part and it began to look as though there would be a deadlock on organization until suddenly, on the fifteenth ballot, the lone Steiwer yielded and cast the decisive ballot for Senator Brownell. There was a brief flurry occasioned by the announcement and the slogans in the caucus came out for a short breathing spell, but after congratulations and regrets had been passed generously around, they returned to the caucus room and decided upon the balance of the ticket without unnecessary delay.

In the other end of the building a more furious battle was being waged, with the honors about even, and the ballots were taken more frequently with a slight fluctuation first in one direction and then in another but neither faction would yield sufficiently to give the other any advantage. This state of affairs kept up for nineteen successive ballots before an adjournment for lunch was taken, with a solid deadlock so far as Eddy's candidacy was concerned, and the spoils wavered between Harris and Davey with the balance inclined slightly in the direction of the latter, who, it is stated, would have won the day had faith been kept all around.

When the House republicans went back into caucus in the afternoon there was no ballot taken, for when the ballot was being prepared Representative Eddy arose, realizing that the fight was all off so far as he was concerned, and in a brief little speech announced his withdrawal from the contest in favor of Mr. Harris.
