BURGLARIOUS STARS.

Planets and Suns May Pick Up Minor Solar Bodies.

Jupiter is much the biggest member of the family of stars which revolve ground our sun; consequently the powof his attraction is greater than that possessed, for instance, by the earth. Juniter's exploits as a burglar have caused very considerable annoyance and inconvenience to astronomers in the days before his powers were fully recognized.

In 1770 there appeared a fine comet, which was found to have an elliptical orbit round the sun of so comparatively small a size that Mr. Lexell, its discoverer, calculated it would return in five and a half years, but in 1775 telescopes were vainly focused on the spot where it was expected to reappear, and again in 1781 it disappointed all observers. Mr. Lexell plunged into fresh calculations and after much research found that Jupiter was the culprit. The unfortunate comet had been rash enough to plunge into the sphere of the giant planet's attraction, with the result that it had been completely diverted from its former orbit and flung off into quite a different one of a twenty year period. It has never been seen again by any one on this earth and probably never Jupiter was also responsible for the delay which occurred in the return of that splendid visitant known as Halley's comet. Halley found that he was not the first discoverer of this big comet. It had appeared at least twice previously, once seventy-five years before and again seventy-six years before that. The astronomer concluded that there would be a further delay in its third return and predicted that its next appearance would be 518 days later. He did not live to see it. But in 1758, the year he had prophesied for its reappearance, astronomers were waiting

HUMORS OF MUSICAL LIFE.

Amusing Pranks the Erratic Types Played With a Composer.

Miss Maude Valerie White, author of numerous popular songs, has told a number of anecdotes, many of them at her own expense. I suppose, she once wrote in the Cornhill Magazine, all composers have had a laugh over the extraordinary mistakes which sometimes occur in the first proofs of their songs. I remember years ago writing a very sentimental song, in which the line occurred-

I've never once regretted the vow I made

My feelings may be imagined when I found they had printed-I've never once regretted the row I made

Miss White also told about an amusing mistake which occurred in the programme of one of her concerts: A well known singer and very good friend of mine was down to sing my two songs, "To Marry" and "Crabbed Age and Youth." But the newspaper announced something very different. Not content with drawing up a programme of my concert, it drew up a programme of my future, for I read as follows: Mr. Blank Maude Valeria White

To Marry Maude van.
Crabbed Age and Youth the friend in question, the coincidence mas. struck me as particularly funny, and I cut the programme out of the newspaper and sent it to him. By the first mail next morning I received an identical cutting from him, with an inquiry whether he was to take this as a formal announcement of our engagement and expressing a mild surprise that he had not been consulted in the matter.

He Knew Sir Walter Scott.

In a booklet called "Sir Waiter Scott and His Country" published in Edinburgh the author quotes this reminiscence from an old man he met who had known the romancer:

"Aye," he minded Sir Walter fine, "I and pair, wi' Tom Purdie on the box plaid and a glengarry cap wi' twa black ribbons hanging doon the back, I mind his dowg tae-Maida, he ca'd it -and an awfu' work he made ower the beast. But he was as pleasant a man as you could speak to, though he wasna thought muckle of as a pleader when they made him shirra o' Selkirk. Is it his butics you're speiring on? Ou, aye, ye'll find a' his bulks ben the hoose."

His Cook Was Called as Interpreter For French Diplomatists.

'Although 'Old Hickory' was a blunt man in all matters of business and reached his purposes by the straightest road," said an old newspaper man, still he was courteous in an eminent degree and had a high respect for the forms of social intercourse. While president of the United States his reception of foreign ministers and eminent citizens was distinguished by courtly etiquette and noble bearing. It is related that on one occasion a foreign minister just arrived had a day and an hour appointed by Mr. McLane, then secretary of state, to be presented to the president, and, misunderstanding the premier's French and perfectly at fault by the apparent simplicity of republican manners, the minister at the appointed time proceeded to the White House alone and rang the bell. "Je suis venu voir M. le President."

said the plenipotentiary to the Ifish servant.

"An' what does that mean?" muttered Pat, and continued, "He says president, though, an' I s'pose he wishes to see the general."

"Oul, out," said the minster, bowing. Without further ceremony the gentleman was ushered into the green room, where the general sat, complacently smoking his corncob pipe, and on the instant he commenced a ceremotious harangue in French, of which "Old Hickory" did not understand one word.

"What does the man want, Patrice?" asked the general, without concealing his surprise at what he had witnessed, "It's French that he's spakin' in, en' with your lave I'll sind for the cook to find out what the gintleman wants." In due time the presiding officer of the kitchen arrived, the mystery was explained, and, to the astonishmedt of the cook, the servant and the old general, an accredited minister from a fareign government was developed. Fortunately at the instant the secretary came in, a ceremonious introduction took place and all parties were soon at ease.-Washington Star.
