'It is in the interest of Oregon City, Clackamas county and the entire state that the legislature be convened in special session, that the tax be so corrected as to make it operative and provide a source of revenue," said Mayor Grant B. Dimick in discussing the subject of a proposed special session last Friday night. Oregon City has a bonded and warrant indebtedness approximating $80,0000, on which is being paid 6 per cent interest, or $4800 per year. The ex-penses of the city, including the payment of interest, amount to $13,000. The city's share of the tax that has been levied on an assessment roll double that of a year ago will be sufficient to meet all current expenses and discharge a part of the indebtedness.

After four years of patient waiting the public of the state of Oregon are at last to have a "Ben Hur" season. The announcement is made that Klaw & Erlanger's original, massive and magnificent production of Gen. Lew Wallace's tamous religious romance "Ben Hur" will be staged at the Marquam Grand been to Portland, where he disposed of a Theatre, Portland, for five nights, commencing Tuesday evening, Dec. 1st. Special matinees are also to be given on Wednesday and Saturday, Dec. 2nd and 5th, respectively. This spectacle has scored the biggest kind of a triumph in this country and Europe. It has com-pletely eclipsed the record of all other tage offerings, and is acknowledged to be the grandest, most impressive, instructive and stupendous indoor entertainment ever offered the public.

The happy culmination of a long engagement, marked by the constant de votion of both parties, occurred here at high noon on Wednesday at the resi-dence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ellinger, when their eldest daughter, Lena C., a beautiful and ac-complished young lady, and Mr. Chas. N. Seely, a prominent and successful farmer of Woodburn, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, the Rev. M. Barber of the Hood View Congrega-tional church, officiating. The bride was dressed in spotless white silk, with appropriate trimmings, carrying in her hand a beautiful boquet of chrisanthe-mums, which at the preper time, was taken up by the bridesmaid, Miss Mabei Seely. About sixty guests were present, all of whom. except a few intimate friends, were related to the contracting parties. After the impressive words were spoken, which made them hus-band and wife, the bewildered but happy couple were congratulated by the guests present, after which all gathered round the family table, which fairly groaned beneath the weight of a bounti-ful repast, to which the appreciative guests did ample justice. Mr. Henry Elligsen did the honors of best man. The presents were numerous, varied and costly, and the happy day was terminated with a social dance at Larson's hall, to which their many friends gath-ered and tipped the "light fantastic" in honor of the happy event.
