BIRTHDAY PRESENTS

Readers of the Enterprise

ON Monday afternoon, Washington's Birthday, February 22, 1904, The Enterprise will distribute a snug sum of money among its subscribers. We have placed on exhibition in the show window of Howell & Jones, the druggists, a glass jar filled with coin of all denominations and this money will be given away to the readers of The Enterprise on the afternoon of February 22, next. If you do not receive a cash gift on your birthday, manage to share the distribution of this money on Washington's anniversary.

Guess and Get the Money

The best guesser will get the bulk of the money but in this contest all will have an equal chance. Payment of subscription money on The Enterprise is the only requisite condition for those desiring to participate in the contest. In order that the old readers of The Enterprise may have an equal chance to share the division of the money with new subscribers, it has been decided to allow One Guess for each $1 50 in subscription that is paid for The Enterprise, whether the payment covers a delinquent subscription or is paid for the paper in advance.

Gef Your Thinking Cap On

Somebody will get this money. Why should not you? No one knows the actual amount of money on deposit in the Jar. The Entrprise placed the bulk of the money in the Jar and the balance, in various denominations, was deposited therein by a person not connected with the paper, the amount so deposited by each being unknown to the other. The seal of the Jar will be broken on the afternoon of Monday, February 22, 1904, and distributed among the successful guessers.

50 Per Cent

OF MONEY TO PERSON making closest guess as to contents of the Jar.

25 per cent to the person making the second closest guess and 5 per cent each to the next five persons guessin closest to the amount.

In case of a tie, the amount involved will be divided.
