FEEDING HORSES ALFALFA.

In the Northwest, where alfalfa is getting to be the great forage plant, the matter of feeding it to work horses is being much discussed. It seems to be a prevailing opinion that alfalfa those on the road or at fast work. In speaking of this, Mr. I. D. O'Donnell says: "Now I would like to correct this as a stellar to the head of a long-headed inventhay is not good for horses, especially this, as alfalfa is too good a feed to ive one. It is draughts of air that do be condemned for any purpose. fact is, nearly everyone who feeds horses gives them too much hay and this applies to all kinds of hay. If a this applies to all kinds of hay. If a horse is given about what alfalfa it horse is given about what alfalfa it should have, say 12 to 15 pounds daily three tight sides and tight roof. In for horses of 1000 pounds and a fair grain ration, the animal will travel just as far and just as fast as with other kinds of hay and be in better

"But if a horse is allowed to eat 30 to 40 pounds a day, which they will or subjected to a sudden change from of alfalfa if it is given them, the horse is sure to become short-winded All in all. about the same things that and sloppy. One of the famous trot-ting horses on the Eastern turf, with stock. a record below 2:03, is fed alfalfa as its only hay. A good ration for the horse of any kind of feed is about one pound of grain and one and a half pounds of hay to each 100 pounds of horse, and this would apply to alfalfa. In fact, the horse should do better on if I could make sure of bringing the pounds of th the alfalfa than with other hays and with less grain.

"This might be the opportune time to say that the majority of the farmers feed too much hay of all kinds to have direct connection with the laying their horses. In fact, the horse barn, organs. to my notion, is where one of the greatest wastes of the farm can be Horses will travel better, stand more work and be healthier if fed less hay. Most farmers give them waste enough to make their bedding. when they have plenty of good straw going to waste on the farm. The London cab horses, which are considered the finest and best kept in the world, have but two hours in the morning and two hours in the evening fice for their pay The big pay car is with the noon hour for feeding.

"At 8 o'clock in the evening every scrap of feed is taken away from them and they are bedded for the night. The average farmer would think his horses were being starved if he found no feed in the manger after 8 or 9 o'clock in the evening The feeding of alfalfa to horses does away with the old-time bran mash once a week, which was considered so necessary. A great many alfalfa feeders have from experience decided that the first cutting of alfalfa is best for horses, or alfalfa that is fairly coarse, or some that has come to full bloom. The idea, is, although they do not know it, that in feeding this kind of alfalfa, the horse gets about the amount it should have. The horse picks it over and takes the best of it and manages to get about what it should have.

"If horses were given the same amount of good, well made alfalfa hay they would eat it and then would have too much. An overworked horse or one run down and thin will pick up and get fat and in good condition on alfalfa pasture quicker than on any other grazing known, and when a grain ration is added they have been known to put on as high as three pounds a day. Horses will eat and do well on the refuse from sheep feeding lots where alfalfa has been fed, while cattle will not take to it. A horse on straight alfalfa will keep cre in Canby; $450. E. M. Rasmussen to A. Downey lot timothy it will get thin with no work."

FALL CARE OF CHICKS.

I do not know of anything more seasonable to write about than the fall care of the new crop of chicks. I J. Sims to K. King. southerly half as well as many others, can tell how of lot 1, blk. 14- Barlow's Add $35.00. it all happened after it is over. Let M. L. Holmes to C. Bullard, 1 acre us get at it in advance. Let me say right here that, though I am con-scious of being the "off ox" on many poultry matters, it is possible that a great variety of ideas might lead to the right conclusions.

One of the every-year falling down 11 and 12, blk 1. Subd. Oak Grove, $1. places is in transferring the summer F. Langensend to B. F. Hart W 1-2 brooders to winter quarters. Usually we have a nice lot of pullets roosting of SE 1-4 sec. 22, 2-5 E; $1000. we have a nice lot of pullets roosting N. W. G. Howard to M. T. A. Bux- around here and there, and our first Fowls are naturally outdoor birds. Their feathers are for no other purpose than to protect them against cold. They do not suffer from the effects of cold as quickly as we might think. Do not be in a hurry to box them up. If they have been roosting in the apple and cherry trees. I venture to say they are healthy and active and a little cool weather only serves to fit them for the real winter. 1 and SE of SW of NW of sec. 11, After winter has come and they occupy their winter quarters, it is better to chill them a little than to overheat them.

Many times we gather them up too early and close them up too tightly. Then we turn them out in the cool morning and put them through a procedure that leads to sniffles, roup and other winter ailments. Practically, and to some extent, they become invalids instead of the cackling, active layers we had figured on, and there is a further possibility that roup will develop, until, when spring does arrive your flock will be as good as none. Let me here mention that cholera is a tame thing as compared with roup in its worst form. Roup is a first cousin to consumption with people. Both are contracted or brought on from the same causes, and both are hereditary or contagious. Yes, yes, there are cures for either, but moneymaking poultry is well poultry, and I hear your "aye, aye," right now.

While there are, no doubt, reliable cures for colds, if the cause is removed, genuine roup is something to be shunned by all poultrymen, but I am straying away from the chick ques-tion. Let us talk more to the point.

The usual course of things is to gather up the whole business at first frost and box them up—pile a hundred frost and box them up-pile a hundred in barely room enough for fifty-then we hold on to the scrubs and all till breeding time and sell the grown-up cockrels at the same or less price than they would have brought in the fall. Why not make a regular cleanup in the fall and give the good ones a better show for winter? Now back to the house question again. Do not close the house up too tightly until real cold weather. Do not be afraid of some fresh air. Fresh air never made consumptives. Do not curtail the amount of air, don't get the valve idea; that is, don't get the idea that air was intended to closed out. Do not be a crank on your own ventilation inventions. Don't prac-

either instance, that little, piercing draught is obliterated.

I do not remember of ever seeing fowls contract a cold in a good shed, and never out of doors, unless they have been turned out of a warm place affect poultry affect people or live-

Winter eggs are desirable, but my experience is that those secured through extreme methods in feeding or housing too warm are paid for dearly in some other way. I would pullets out in the early spring in prime condition. It is not so much a question of a little cold weather as it is to dampness; wet feet seem to

OF GENERAL INTEREST.

The biggest pay day in the indus trial history of the world was at the Carnegie works, at and near Pittsburg September 16th. There was paid out within twenty-four hours $2,000,000 to the workmen. The workmen were paid while at work. Not a minute is lost by the workmen going to the of whirled up alongside of the man at work, and his money is handed him.

The big baggage car is fitted up with four pay windows with Paymaster W. H. Corbett and his eight assistants locked inside among the bags of gold boxes of silver, and mounds of fiftydollar bills, none smaller. Two men at each window are paying out almost as the car is moving, while alongside of the car stalk Chief of the Carnegie Police Griff Williams and four of his best men, each armed to the teeth.
