D. Osborn, who died at Wilsonville, Clackamas County, Tuesday at the age of 46 years. Deceased was a physician and druggist at Wilsonville. Dr. Osborn's wife and daughter accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Osborn to this city, departing today for their home at Wilsonville.—Brownsville Times, February 23. Drs. Beattie & Beattie, Dentists, Rooms 16, 17, 18, Weinhard Building. A review of the career of George P. Rowell, the dean of American advertising-agents, is an article of surpassing interest in the Argonaut for February 24, 1906. It is entitled "Millionaire Advertiser." Mr. Rowell cites many striking incidents of vast fortunes that have been made by intelligent use of the printing press. He also relates entertaining stories of his own eventful life. The French letter tells the intimate story of the election of President Fallieres; another installment of letters from Californian writers naming the books that gave them the most pleasure in 1905 are printed; and the short story is a rattling tale of the sea, by Graham MacNeill, entitled "The Union." The book and dramatic columns are, as usual, sprightly and up to date. In the future the Enterprise will give the following subscription clubbing rates: Weekly Oregonian and Enterprise, both one year, $2.25; Semi Weekly Journal and Enterprise, both one year, $2.00. SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN TELLS OF THE NEW PAPER MILL. With Illustrations Eastern Publication Gives Details of Expensive Construction. In its issue of February 24th, the Scientific American gave with illustrations a detailed account of the building of the new paper mill in this city for the Willamette Pulp & Paper Company. The account follows: While reinforced concrete as a structural material has attained wide popularity in Europe and the eastern part of the United States, its general use on the Pacific Coast may be said to be almost in its infancy. Round about Los Angeles it has entered into building operations to a considerable extent, but north of that point, even to the British line, its use has hitherto been very limited. The steel and brick influences of San Francisco have been sufficiently powerful to exclude it from that city and neighborhood. In fact, San Francisco has an ordinance prohibiting its use within the corporate city limits. But the ice seems about to be broken, and this will come about through the influence of a single San Francisco firm—the Pacific Construction Company. Early in 1905 the Willamette Pulp and Paper Company, of Oregon City, Oregon, presented plans to the Pacific Construction Company for a very large paper mill building to be erected in the city named. The plans called for a brick and steel building, but by advice of F. A. Koeltz, chief engineer and vice-president, and F. M. Butler, secretary of the Pacific Construction Company, the plans were changed so as to call for reinforced concrete in place of brick. The advice upon which this change was based was given for several reasons. In the first place, the Willamette Pulp and Paper Company were in haste to have their building built, and it was shown that much time could be saved by using reinforced concrete in place of brick. Another principal reason was the conditions that would naturally surround a building erected in this special location, and devoted to the special purpose of pulp and paper manufacturing. The climate of Oregon City is a very rainy one, and the making of pulp and paper at the same time necessitates the use of a great deal of water; consequently a building so located and so employed would be subjected to much moisture, both from without and within. The paper mill building at Oregon City has just been completed and is one of the largest of the kind on the Pacific slope. It is 339 feet long, 92 feet wide, and its walls are 56 feet high. It has a basement and two floors at the "beater" end and a basement and single floor in the machine room end, with 20 feet between floors. The foundation was laid upon a bed of heavy boulders from the river. Trenches for the foundation walls were dug in the boulders and footings five feet wide put in. On top of these walls, and reaching up to the sills of the basement windows, the walls of the superstructure were made 28 inches thick; while the main walls of the building were made 12 inches thick, buttressed by 3-foot pilasters, 15 feet on centers, the pilasters being 20 inches thick. These pilasters are reinforced by corrugated steel bars, six bars being imbedded in each pilaster, and held in place by bands of 5-16 round iron, one foot apart. Through the main walls, both above and beneath the window openings, and extending the entire length of the walls, corrugated steel bars were also used. Supporting the floors are concrete columns 20x24 inches in size and 16 feet apart lengthwise of the building, and at varying distances crosswise of the building, the distances being regulated to accommodate the machinery, and there being four lines of columns. The main girders running lengthwise of the building are 20x36 inches, and the cross beams connecting thereto are 14x26 inches. The columns are reinforced by corrugated steel bars, four in each column, connected and held in place by 5-16 round iron. The beams are reinforced by both Kahn and corrugated bars. The floors comprise concrete slabs of an average thickness of six inches, which are reinforced by expanded metal. The top is finished with the usual sidewalk finish. In the basement story are also placed numerous piers for carrying the weight of the line shafts, and paper mill machinery, all being reinforced by the same material as used in the beams. The materials used in the manufacture of the concrete consisted of local Willamette gravel and Columbia river sand, mixed with Teutonic cement. The form sheeting was beveled 1x6 surfaced boards. The roof trusses are steel girders spanning the whole 92 feet width of the building, and the roof covering is of wood felt with graveled top. The materials entering into the manufacture of the concrete were landed upon the bank of the river near the site of the building, loaded into cars with an electric derrick, and the cars were then run to the mixer hopper. After passing through the mixer the material was delivered into wheelbarrows, and the loaded wheelbarrows were raised to the required height by electric elevators. The building was completed within a period of six months, and cost the paper company in the neighborhood of $100,000. The Portland Daily Telegram and the Enterprise, both one year for only $5. This is an exceptional opportunity to get a daily paper together with your official county paper. SOCIALISTS MEETING SUNDAY. The regular monthly meeting of the Socialists will be held in Knapp's hall Sunday, March 4, at 11 a. m. Dinner will be served at noon and the afternoon will be devoted to music, addresses and educational features. The date for the county convention will be decided upon and a discussion of available candidates will probably be held. The new Socialist song book will be used in the program. The Socialists will place a full Legislative and county ticket in the field. In the future the Enterprise will give the following subscription clubbing rates: Weekly Oregonian and Enterprise, both one year, $2.25; Semi Weekly Journal and Enterprise, both one year, $2.00. Either call at Enterprise office or mail your order. INSURANCE. Plate Glass, burglar-proof, and all kinds of casualty insurance, written by O. A. Cheney, Oregon City. Office with Justice of the Peace. GOOD GRANGE MEETING. New Era Members Discuss Washington and Lincoln. The New Era Grange met last Saturday and had a very pleasant meeting. After going through the regular routine of business and having a fine dinner gotten up by the sisters, the discussion of Lincoln and Washington was taken up. Geo. Randall, candidate for representative on the Republican ticket and one of our charter members, made a very able address on the history of these two great men. Clackamas county will do well to have Mr. Randall represent them in the legislature at Salem next winter. Richard Scott, of Milwaukie, and Grant Dimick of Oregon City, visiting members, told us what great things they would do if they were elected county judge. Dimick says he will have the county out of debt in two years, and reduce taxes, and if Scott is elected he will have good roads all over the county and paint the fences white. The lecture programme was very good and much enjoyed by the people. Mr. Dick, of Canby, was elected and installed master of the Grange for the ensuing term, in the place of Mrs. Meindl, who resigned. Our state lecturer of Mulino, Mrs. Howard was also with us. MEMBER. To One Who Smiled. You gave me but a passing glance, And, smiling, hurried on your way; I pause to bless the happy chance That made me better all the day. Where others grimly hurried by, You smiled as one whose heart was light, And caused me to forget that I Had room within my heart for spite. I know not whither you may fare, Nor what your dearest hope may be, But may your path lead far from care And to some glorious destiny. For joy had set your eyes aglow And were smiling when we met; You made the morning bright, and so Have left me deeply in your debt.

O. A. CHENEY, Republican Candidate for County Treasurer.

O. A. Cheney, a favorable candidate for Treasurer of Clackamas County; a veteran of the Civil War, and for twenty years since a Republican newspaper publisher; is well qualified for the position, and if elected will need no deputy. Has been a staunch Republican during his whole business life, voting for every Republican President from Fremont to the present date. Some voters are of the opinion that he is the same person that published the Herald-Courier for a time, but no, that was another Cheney altogether. ARE YOU A FARMER? If you are, then you need a good farm paper. The Enterprise has a splendid offer. We will furnish the Enterprise and the Oregon Agriculturist and Rural Northwest, the best agricultural paper in the large section it serves, both one year for only $1.50—the price of the Enterprise alone. This farm paper is highly recommended by the leading experts on farming, stock raising and fruit growing. This offer is a snap. Call at the office or mail us your subscription.
