The First Ice Cream. The glory of introducing ice cream to America is one which, in the minds of the younger element, at least, would rival any of the pretensions of Christopher Columbus, Sir Walter Raleigh, Fulton, Howe or Edison. According to Appleton's Magazine, it was Mme. Delacroix to whom Americans are indebted for the beginning of their notorious passion for "cool interiors."

DEATHS OF THE WEEK

George O. Quinn, aged 32 years, died Friday morning, August 24, at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Quinn at Canemah. Mr. Quinn worked at the W. P. & P. company mills, where he was employed, until about a month ago, when his failing health obliged him to leave the mill. Heart disease was the cause of his death. Father Hildebrand officiated at the funeral, which was held at the late home Sunday afternoon, interment being made at the Canemah cemetery. The pall bearers were selected from among the members of the Woodmen of the World, to which the deceased belonged. They were C. S. Fuge, C. E. Tate, C. R. Curtis, I. D. Taylor, C. Croner, and O. Erickson.

Frederick Gadke, Sr., aged 77 years, died at his home in this city, corner Twelfth and Adams streets, Saturday morning. Mr. Gadke was a native of Germany, where he was born February 22, 1829. He came to America in 1860, and for the last 27 years had been a resident of Oregon City. He is survived by seven children, as follows: Fred, George, Charles, Mary, Gust, and Lena, all of this city, and Mrs. Anna Maple, of Seattle. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. E. S. Bollinger at the First Congregational church at 10 o'clock Monday morning and interment followed at Mountain View cemetery.

Young Man Falls Or Is Thrown From Train Near Oregon City.

James Brennan, who said his home is at Towas, Mich., while under the influence of liquor either fell or was thrown off the South-bound California overland near this city last Friday night. After lying out all night, he regained his senses in the morning and came to this city where Dr. Carl dressed his wounds, consisting of a broken jaw and a number of severe cuts and bruises about the face and head.

In explaining the accident, Brennan, before being sent to Portland, said that he with a number of other workmen, was to leave Portland via the O. R. & N. train on the night of the accident for Elgin, where he had accepted employment. He went to the Union Depot, where he declares he became separated from his associates, and instead of boarding the O. R. & N. train, by mistake, got aboard the Southern Pacific overland train that passes through Oregon City at 9:32 p. m. He admitted taking a number of drinks with strangers and claimed that he had been robbed of between $40 and $50. When found he was minus his hat, coat and pocketbook, but these articles were subsequently found in the vicinity of Canemah, the purse containing only $5 in money.

MUST PAY TAXES ON THEIR FRANCHISE

Corporations in This County Are Assessed at Rate of $5000 Each.

Franchises were considered as valuable assets and treated as such by Assessor Nelson this year in making up the assessment roll of assessable property in Clackamas county. For the first time in the history of the county, franchises were listed at a nominal valuation and corporations will be obliged to pay taxes on the rights they have acquired and are exercising so profitably to themselves. The Oregon Water Power & Railway Company, the Oregon & California (Southern Pacific) Railroad Company and the Portland General Electric Company were this year each assessed $5000 on account of the franchises they own in Oregon City and Clackamas county.

LIFE IN JAVA.

The Natives Are Grave and Mafaly Live and Eat in Public.

The Javans live much in public, and the poorer classes, instead of eating their meals at home, as is the manner of the unsociable Hindus, seem usually to breakfast and dine at one of the itinerant cookshops to be found at every street corner. More exclusive people may be seen buying the small packets of curry and rice wrapped in fresh plantain leaves and pinned with bamboo splinters, which are intended for home consumption.

To stroll down a village street and watch the culinary operations in progress at wayside eating shops was an unfeeling source of amusement, and very clean and appetizing they looked, though the smell was occasionally somewhat trying to the European nose. The Javans, like all rice eating people, are fond of pungent and evil smelling sauces, and equivalents of the Burman gnapue and Japanese bean soy are in constant requisition.

The natives, and especially the children, look fat and healthy and appear to enjoy life under easy conditions, though they are, generally speaking, of grave demeanor and are not endowed with the unfailing vivacity which distinguishes the Burmans and Japanese. During the six weeks that we spent in the island we did not see half a dozen beggars and, except in cities, certainly not that number of policemen.—Pearson's.

THE VEILED PROPHET.

He Was the Most Noted Impostor of the Middle Ages.

The celebrated "veiled prophet" of history was a Moslem fanatic whose real name was Haken Ibn Hashem. He was born about the middle of the eighth century and became the most noted impostor of the middle ages. He pretended that he was an embodiment of the spirit of the "living God" and, being very proficient in jugglery (which the ignorant mistook for the power to work miracles), soon drew an immense number of followers around him. He always wore a gold mask, claiming that he did so to protect the mortals of this earth, who, he said, could not look upon his face and live.

At last, after thousands had quitted the city and even left the employ of the Caliph al Mohdi to join the fanatical movement, an army was sent against the "veiled prophet," forcing him to flee for safety to the castle at Keh, north of the Oxus. Finally, when ultimate defeat was certain, the prophet killed and burned his whole family and then threw himself into the flames, being entirely consumed except his hair, which was kept in a museum at Bagdad until the time of the crusades. He promised his faithful followers that he would reappear to them in the future dressed in white and riding a white horse.

FABLE OF THE PANSY.

The Family of Six That is Contained in the Flower.

A pretty fable about the pansy is current among French and German children. The flower has five petals and five sepals. In most pansies, especially of the earlier and less highly developed varieties, two of the petals are plain in color and three are gay. The two plain petals have a single sepal, two of the gay petals have a sepal each, and the third, which is the largest of all, has two sepals.

The fable is that the pansy represents a family consisting of husband and wife and four daughters, two of the latter being stepchildren of the wife. The plain petals are the stepchildren, with only one chair; the two small, gay petals are the daughters, with a chair each, and the large, gay petal is the wife, with two chairs. To find the father one must strip away the petals until the stamens and pistils are bare. They have a fanciful resemblance to an old man, with a fannel wrap about his neck, his shoulders upraised and his feet in a bath tub. The story is probably of French origin, because the French call the pansy the stepmother.

Sunlight and Eyesight.

Sunlight as distinct from sun heat is of benefit to human eyes. Unless refracted from white cliffs or stretches of sand or by other means, it does not cause any impairment of vision. It is the natural provision of the sense of sight and is in harmony with the natural period for work and pleasure—that is, the day. So soon as we introduce artificial light we deal with that which needs caution. A dim light injures vision because the eye alters its shape to receive the feeble rays. On the other hand, a strong artificial light will produce inflammation of the eye surface and worse.

Nero's Appearance.

In his youth Nero was remarkably handsome, but early in manhood his habits of dissipation made him exceedingly corpulent. To judge from his medals and the descriptions left of him he must have weighed over 200 pounds. His features were regular, but his eyes were so protuberant as to be almost a deformity, and he was nearsighted, so much so that he could not recognize his acquaintances across the street.

His Mistake.

Mr. Silmsky—I don't believe the city water is safe. I notice it has a clouded appearance this morning and tastes sort of—milky—and— Mrs. Starvem—That glass contains milk, Mr. Silmsky. The water is at your left. And, by the way, your board bill was due yesterday.—Cleveland Leader.

It has done me good to be somewhat parched by the heat and drenched by the rain of life.—Longfellow.
