RAIN WILL DO MORE GOOD THAN HARM

Continued Downpour, However, Would Injure Hop Crop.

The rain storm of Wednesday and yesterday has been generally welcomed by farmers of Clackamas county. The roads have been exceedingly dusty for many months and the thorough soaking they have received in the past 12 hours will do much to increase the comfort of the traveler.

The downpour does not give promise of continuance and it is not thought that any material injury to crops will result, though the tomato crop may suffer. This product, however, is not grown to a great extent in this section, though the yield is greater than ever before.

Hops are nearly all harvested in the small yards and will not be damaged. In many of the big yards the picking is only half over, but unless the rains continue the berry will not be seriously damaged, in fact a short rain will wash off the vines and help the crop.

In the Canby section the drying of prunes has been finished and the Willamette Fruit company dried 2,300 bushels. Drying of Italian prunes commenced last Monday and is well under way and there are few prunes on the ground to be injured.

The late potatoes will be aided by the rains, which will increase the yield.

CHARGES HUSBAND THREATS TO KILL

In the divorce suit of Frank J. Phelps against Maggie V. Phelps, the defendant has filed an answer, denying substantially every allegation in the complaint which charged her, among other things, with exposing their only child to consumption by persisting in associating herself and child with neighbors who were afflicted with that disease. Mrs. Phelps, on the other hand charges her husband repeatedly threatening to kill her as well as her relatives, and states that he has pending against him a charge of threatening to kill. She claims that Phelps is a man of limited means, and possessed of a violent temper, on account of which he is not the proper person to have the custody of the child for whose care she asks to be entrusted in addition to being granted a divorce and the privilege of resuming her maiden name, Maggie V. Lowe.

ASTORIA TOUGHS MURDER MARSHAL.

SALEM, OR., Sept. 12.—As the outcome of a drunken brawl in the saloon of William Murphy, at St. Paul last night, Town Marshal Krechter, of that place was shot and instantly killed and four others seriously wounded. A crowd of toughs from Astoria, hop-pickers from the Hess-Raymond yard, had been on a spree all day and made trouble in the saloon last night and about 9 o'clock Marshal Krechter and posse, composed of Albert Lambert and Norce Manacle, went in to quell the disturbance. Trouble ensued and the shooting began.

Latest reports from St. Paul are to the effect that only one fatality resulted in the shooting scrape, that of Marshal Krechter. The other one supposed to have been mortally injured is said to be improving. The latter's name is given as Fred Bustrom, of Astoria, a member of the gang of rowdies. The others injured in the fight were Alfred Lambert, deputy marshal, shot in the arm; a man by name of Yost, shot in the leg, and another man by name of Howe, S. Manage, another deputy marshal, was badly beaten about the head.

Four arrests have been made so far as can be learned, being Sam Warren, Jim Seeley, Peterson and Fred Bustrom, the man so seriously injured. The inquest over the body of Marshal Krechter is being conducted by Coroner Clough this afternoon. It is understood from one who was in the saloon of William Murphy a few minutes before the shooting occurred, E. C. Ermel, of this city, who arrived this morning, that there was no less than a dozen of the gang raising the disturbance.

HOW LONG CAN CAT LIVE WITHOUT FOOD?

How long can a cat live without food?

A reliable answer to this query would supply desired information to an Oregon City family, says the Telegram correspondent. One week ago last Monday morning the members of the family left the house, after satisfying themselves that pussy had been locked out of doors. Not a person entered the building again until the following Sunday night, when the half-starved cat was found inside of the house, from which it was impossible for her to escape. An abundance of food was immediately provided, and of this the cat ate ravenously, and leaving the house, has not since been seen. The members of the family have no means of knowing whether the cat did not propose taking any further chances or whether it overate and afterwards died.

The only thing in the way of food or drink that the cat could possibly get in the house was a quantity of water in a small basin, and this had not entirely disappeared. Having lived without a morsel of food for nearly seven days, and accepting the old saying that a cat is possessed of nine lives, a local mathematician contends that a cat can live at least 63 days without any substantial nourishment.

An Ounce of Prevention is worth a pound of cure. There are many poor sufferers, Consumptives who are hopeless of getting well, who, if they had taken care of themselves, would now be well. A cough is the foundation of consumption. Ballard's Horehound Syrup will cure that cough. Mrs. S., Great Falls, Montana, writes: "I have used Ballard's Horehound Syrup in my family for years—my children never suffer with coughs." Sold by Huntley Bros. Drug Co.

WAS SECOND STEAMER BUILT IN STATE

Pictures Are Reproduced of Pioneer Boat, Lot Whitcomb—Built in 1850.

From a miniature photograph, the property of Chief of Police Burns, Rev. S. P. Davis, of this city, has produced an excellent picture of the pioneer steamer, the Lot Whitcomb, which was the second steamboat that was built in Oregon. The reproduction is considered particularly interesting to the old settlers here. The original picture of the steamboat was taken while it was stationed at the old Graham landing, in this city, and the old town of Linn City, that occupied the site of the present paper mills, is plainly shown in the background.

The Columbia was the first river steamer built in this state, and it was launched on July 3, 1850. On Christmas Day, of the same year, however, at a big jollification meeting at Milwaukie, the Lot Whitcomb was successfully introduced to the waters of the Willamette. The vessel was named after the founder of Milwaukie, and many of the men associated with the ownership and management of the property at an early date have become prominent in the business life of the Northwest, several now being rated as millionaires.

The original owners of the boat were S. S. White, Berryman Jennings and Lot Whitcomb, and the first complement of officers included Captain William L. Hanscome; W. H. H. Hall, pilot and Jacob Kamm, engineer. It was a commodious sidewheeler, 160 feet long, 24 feet beam, 5 feet 8 inches of hold, with wheels 18 feet in diameter. The machinery had been brought from New Orleans to be placed in a boat on the Sacramento, but on arriving there it was bought before it was unloaded by White and his associates. Captain J. C. Ainsworth had come out from St. Louis to run the steamer on the Sacramento at a salary of $300 per month, but was induced by Whitcomb to come to Oregon. By the time the steamer was ready he had over $2000 wages due, for which he was given stock in the company. When the machinery was secured in San Francisco, Jacob Kamm was employed to come to Oregon and place it in the boat, he receiving a salary of $400 per month. The boilers came in 21 pieces, and as there were no boiler-makers in Oregon at that time, Kamm and his helper, a man named Blakesley, were obliged to put them together, unaided, as well as to make the tools necessary for the task. When the building of the boat was completed the stock was sold to a number of the early settlers, among them being Robert Newell, of Champeong; Sydney W. Moss, Robert Canfield, Hiram Clark, Alanson Beers and Jacob Hunsaker, of Oregon City; Thomas Hubbard, of Yamhill county and Walter Pomery of Polk county.

The steamer did its first work on the Astoria route, and, being an exceptionally good towboat, handled nearly all of the sailing vessels that came up the Columbia. It was an expensive boat to run, and in 1854 was sold to the California Steam Navigation company, and on August 12, of that year, steamed out over the bar in command of Captain George Flavel. Outside she was picked up by the steamer Peytoria and towed to San Francisco, Captain Ainsworth going down with her. The trip was rough, and she reached her destination with 3 feet of water in her hold. On the Sacramento her name was changed to the Annie Abernethy, and she ran regularly for many years between Sacramento and San Francisco. Oregon City people have no knowledge of what finally became of the steamer.

RED FRONT

WILL FIX LOCATION OF VALUABLE MINES

Marion—Clackamas Boundary Line an Indefinite Quantity—To Be Surveyed.

As to whether the Ogle Mountain mines are located in Marion or Clackamas county has long been a disputed question because of the indefiniteness of the boundary line between the two counties. But while at Salem this week on official business the members of the Clackamas county court brought up the subject before the members of the Marion county court, and it was decided the County surveyors of the two counties should meet next Tuesday and definitely establish the dividing line.

As it is now legally described, the line between the two counties extends up Pudding River to the mouth of Butte Creek, thence up Butte Creek to its source, thence from its source on a line due east to the summit of the Cascades. The indefiniteness of the boundary line exists in locating the source of Butte Creek, which consists of a swamp, into which several small streams empty. The settlement of this question is important only as determining the true location of these properties that are now being satisfactorily developed. It has been contended by each county that these mines are within its borders, and the controversy will only be ended by the official survey of the line that has been arranged for.
