LARGE ENROLLMENT FIRST DAY OF INSTITUTE

Excellent Papers At Forenoon Session Awakens Much Interest Among Teachers—Reception At Knapp's Hall Wednesday Night.

The opening session of the Clackamas County Teachers' Institute at the Barclay high school Wednesday morning attracted a large band of intelligent and enthusiastic teachers from all parts of the county, as well as a number of prominent state educators. The program Wednesday morning was divided into two sections—advanced and the primary. The latter was carried out as previously published and was highly enjoyed. In the advanced, Professor L. R. Traver, former superintendent of the Pendleton schools had for his subject, "Language." He divided composition into three parts. Fourth and fifth years of a child's life to Narrative, sixth and seventh years to Description interwoven with Narrative, and eighth to Exposition. He brought out some helpful thoughts for the teacher's consideration.

Professor E. D. Reasler, president of the state normal at Monmouth, spoke on the "Essentials in the course of study." The Professor gave as the essential studies of any school: reading, spelling, language, elemental history; 2, writing, drawing, manual training; 3, written and mental arithmetic, algebra; 4, geography, physiology, nature study; 5, history, civics, literature.

Professor H. D. Sheldon of the University of Oregon spoke on the subject of children's interest in reading. Professor Sheldon had a broad subject and handled it in an interesting manner. The professor said in substance any sort of study which has to do with individualism should be encouraged. It is our fundamental duty to understand the material with which we work. It is well to know what children are interested in so as to use that information for their benefit. Any child study which will add new interest to teachers work will help reap up any rut in which he might fall.

A number of Miss Benson's music pupils will assist in entertaining in the afternoon.

Professor Reasler was called to Salem to normal work there Wednesday evening and will not be able to attend longer here.

The reception at Knapp's hall from 8 to 10 Wednesday evening will be a very delightful affair, giving the teachers a chance to become better acquainted with one another.

The following committees were appointed Wednesday: Publication—1, primary, Misses Frances Myers, Nellie M. Stevens, Margaret Williams; 2, L. A. Reed, T. J. Gary, Mrs. Viola Godfrey. Resolutions, H. C. Seymour, Milwaukie, T. P. Kendall, West Oregon City, and Miss L. L. Lemmon, Oak Grove.

Following is a partial list of the enrollment Wednesday morning:

GRANGE PROTESTS RUSSIAN METHODS

Whereas, our postoffice department, through the post office inspectors, can declare a "fraud order" and "hold up" the mail of any citizen, whether guilty or innocent of any fraud, and such citizen has no power of appeal in any court.

Therefore, be it resolved, that Molalla grange No. 519, of Molalla, Oregon, in regular session, this second day of February, 1907, favors the Crumpacker bill recently passed by the lower house of congress, and urges our members in the U. S. senate to use their influence in passing the bill in the senate, which measure embodies all the protection against fraud that is contained in the present law, and gives any citizen against whom "fraud orders" are issued a right to a hearing in court, and a "square deal."

ANNUAL MEETING OF XENOPHON'S OWNERS

A meeting of the stockholders of the famous Percheron stallion, Xenophon, was held at the Elkhorn livery stables in this city, Saturday, February 2. Xenophon is one of the best horses in this county and won prizes at the Lewis and Clark and St. Louis exhibitions.

The purpose of the meeting was to elect officers and directors for the coming year. The meeting was called to order by James Fullam of Viola, who was later elected president. Wm. J. Wilson of this city was elected secretary and treasurer. J. W. Doughty of Currinsville, J. F. Cromer of Springwater and F. E. Albright of Molalla were elected directors.

It was voted that the next meeting be held at Estacada, on February 2, 1908. Xenophon is being kept at the farm of J. W. Doughty of Currinsville.

SHUBEL DEBATERS LEAD STATE SOLONS

Shubel, Feb. 3.—Fred Kiebe is building a barn on his place.

Frank Grossmiller of Portland was in our neighborhood one day last week.

Miss Lydia Hornshuh visited with Miss Johanna Massinger one day last week.

Henry Staben has gone to Idaho. E. E. Glinther made a business trip to the county seat, Wednesday.

Otto Moehnke is kept very busy with his shingle mill at present.

Miss Annie Grossmiller visited with Miss Mabel Clark one day during the last week.

David Moehnke, our mail carrier, had an exciting accident last Thursday. The axle of his cart broke, throwing him out, but his well trained horse not noting the difference, kept right on. It slackened its speed and "turned in" at every mail box, but was stopped at the store.

Our debating society met at the school house Saturday night at the usual time. In spite of the wet, the school house was crammed. Standing room was at a premium. The question, "Resolved, that woman should have the right of suffrage" was ably discussed, and was decided in favor of the affirmative. When it comes to wit and oratory, the Oregon legislature might do well to give us a call and get a few pointers. Our next question is "Resolved, that all native born male citizens should have the right to vote at the age of eighteen years." Harry Kirbyson is leader of the affirmative, and Jay Dix is leader of the negative.

County Treasurer's Notice.

I now have money to pay county warrants endorsed prior to July 1, 1905. Interest will cease on such warrants on date of this notice.

Oregon City, Oregon, February 8, 1907.
J. C. PADDOCK,
Treasurer of Clackamas County, Or.

SUICIDE WAS PROBABLY INSANE

UNKNOWN WHO JUMPED INTO TRAIN AT CLACKAMAS HAD ACTED QUEERLY.

No Clue To His Identity Disclosed by His Possessions or Evidence at Coroner's Inquest.

The stranger who was killed near Clackamas station Tuesday afternoon by being run over by a train, probably committed suicide while demented. This was the gist of the evidence brought out at the inquest. The jury returned a verdict that the unknown man's death, caused by the Southern Pacific train at 1:25 p. m., was unavoidable and no one to blame except the victim.

During the inquest it was brought out that the stranger had been seen all day around the Clackamas station and all thought there was something strange about the man. He was a man of about 40 years of age, well built, had sandy hair and mustache. He was dressed very plainly and had in his possession a bible and some religious tracts. Not a thing was found in his pockets that would give a clue to his identity.

In his pockets there were a couple of business cards, one bearing the name of a business firm in Tacoma and the other of a Portland plumbing firm and on the back of which the stranger had written the address of "C. C. Miers, Union House, 68. Everett St."

The man was seen around Clackamas by a man who came to the home of Dace Close at Edgewood saying that there was a man down the track who was dying for the need of water. Close told him to bring the stranger to the house and he was brought and placed on the bed and his sufferings relieved, when all of a sudden the sufferer jumped straight up out of the bed with his hands in the air, crying out, "My God, I am well, let me up, let me up."

The man then walked out of the house and walked down the track toward Portland.

He was next seen by the section crew a few minutes before the accident occurred. One of the Himler boys and Ed Deadman, who were watching the train pass, saw the train run over him.

The fellow seemed deranged and did not listen to the section crew when they warned him that the train was coming. He kept on running toward the train and when the train whistled a warning, the man only ran faster.

On coming to one of the cattle guards those who saw the stranger running at a breakneck speed ahead of the train wondered if he would hesitate and jump off the track. But instead of that the demented man cleared the wide space with an easy stride.

The train was traveling at a speed that could not be slackened at once and the engine struck the man, and as the last car passed, the mangled form lay by the side of the track.

The left arm and leg had been cut off and the rest of the body was in a mangled state. His features outside of a large bruise on the left side and spattered with blood were not injured. The remains were brought to Coroner Holman's office, where the inquest was held at 9:30 o'clock Wednesday morning.

The Morning After.

By Sergeant Stewart, U. S. A. Same old Christmas I had last year; Same old lunches and the same old beer.

Same old head and the same old thirst; Same old excuse I had at first.

Same old nose and the same old clothes; Same old bluff that never goes.

Same old cop in the same old place, Same old feeling in an empty space.

Same old Judge with the same old grudge, Same old story "that I couldn't ludge."

Same old sentence, same old fine; Same old phone to a friend of mine.

Same old lecture; same old say; Same old pledge in the same old way. Same old vow with the same old tear, Same old drunk I'll have next year.

FIRST SKIRMISH.

Salem, Feb. 6.—The first skirmish in the senate on the normal school question took place this morning when a motion to indefinitely postpone the bill for only two normal schools was withdrawn and the whole question was made a special order for Thursday afternoon.

NEW AGENTS FOR The BUTTERICK PATTERN

As it is, and always has been, our object to keep in touch with the more reliable and higher class of goods, we have added one more standard line, by accepting the Agency for the Butterick Patterns. Here-to-fore we have handled the McCall Patterns, but believing the Butterick to be more accurate, more up-to-date and of a higher standard, we have accepted it's agency in place of the McCall. The Butterick Patterns will now be 10c and 15c, none higher. You can buy the "Delineator" at this store after this month, at regular price.
