There are about 10 Oregon City and Molalla men in the gang, engaged in the big survey contract of the Indian reservation.

PARDON GRANTED OLDEST PRISONER.

Salem, May 7.—Henry Wintzingerode, commonly known as "Dutch Henry," has secured release from the penitentiary through the kindly influence of Moses Taylor, the wealthy Umatilla county farmer who served a term in prison for attempting to burn a neighbor's barn.

Wintzingerode was a "life-timer" and had been in prison 26 years, longer than any convict now there. In that 26 years he had not violated a prison rule and was greatly beloved by all the prisoners. Moses Taylor was among those who were very favorably impressed by Henry's manner and conduct, and when Taylor was pardoned about two weeks ago he interceded with the Governor in behalf of his former associate. Promising to give Wintzingerode a home as long as he lived, Taylor finally persuaded the governor to turn the old German free. This action was also recommended by the prison officials, and by prison chaplain E. W. St. Pierre. Wintzingerode left today for Taylor's Umatilla county ranch, where he will find a welcome home.

Wintzingerode was brought to the prison in 1881, and was recorded as convict number 1120. Since that time 4200 prisoners have come to the prison and most of them have served their terms and departed. Aged 25 when he arrived, Wintzingerode has grown old since he donned the stripes of a felon, but he has not complained or asked for favors or clemency. Faithfully he performed the work assigned him, though suffering for many years from a bad case of goitre. He protested his innocence when charged with the murder of Jacob Sawyer, in Washington county, in 1880, and his case was vigorously contested in the courts. He was convicted, however, and has since quietly accepted his fate, though never receding from his assertion of innocence.

Long confinement has somewhat unbalanced his mind, and made him "queer." He is now past the age when it will be easy for him to make a living unaided, so it is probable that no action would have been taken in his behalf but for the generous offer of Moses Taylor.

EXPECT 2000 STUDENTS AT O. A. C.

B. W. Johnson, postmaster at Corvallis, says of the state agricultural college at that place:

"The school is doing a great work. It has over 800 students now and within two years there will be 2000 enrolled. The location is ideal for a college of this kind, and the benefits to the farmers have been many. The station has helped many of them in their search for diversified methods and their farms have become much more profitable as a result. The school is so crowded now that not half of the students can get into the chapel, and they are working under difficulties. This will be overcome by the new buildings provided for in the appropriation of the last legislature."

TEACHERS' MEETINGS INTEREST.

"Teachers in this state are much interested in two important educational meetings which will be held in July," said J. H. Ackerman, state superintendent of schools, in an interview, Monday. "The first of these meetings is that of the State Teachers' association, and will be held at Salem, July 1-3, inclusive. Committees on arrangements and program are hard at work, and have prepared what we consider will prove the best program ever offered at the State association. We are also arousing considerable interest in the National Educational association which will be held at Los Angeles, July 8-12. A great many Oregon teachers will take advantage of the reduced rates and will attend this meeting."

Mr. and Mrs. Meldrum McCowan of Medford returned to their home, Wednesday, after a pleasant visit with Mrs. McCowan's mother, Mrs. Ramsby, and other relatives in Oregon City.

COURT HOUSE NEWS

The Klatsch divorce suit was concluded at 6 o'clock Monday afternoon. Judge McBride will give his decision Wednesday morning.

Testimony was introduced Monday afternoon tending to show that Mr. Klatsch was all that he had attempted to show his wife was. Feeling ran pretty high between the witnesses for the different sides. One of the Mrs. Klatsch partisans slapped David Martin during the noon recess while they were standing in the front door of the court house. There was some fear of a general row as a number of the men "tanked up" pretty freely. A couple of officers and a half-dozen other local men hung around Eighth and Main streets until the car took the divorce suit crowd out of town, expecting there would be trouble between a man and his wife who testified on different sides in the case.

RAILS ARRIVE AFTER FIVE YEARS DELAY.

Glory be! Rails for the new O. W. P. tracks on Main street are being unloaded, Tuesday. The rails are standard, city street rails weighing 86 pounds to the yard or 16 pounds heavier than required by ordinance. Men in charge say they understand work of laying them will begin in a day or two.

The O. W. P. franchise ordinance granted in November 1902 required new tracks to be laid on Main street within five years. The five years expire in November next. The council recently amended the ordinance to permit rails 6 1/2 inches instead of 7 inches deep be laid, as the company had the 6 1/2 inch iron on hand, and the weight was above the 70 pounds required.

Franklin T. Griffith, local attorney for the company, says the new track will be laid in the center of the street. The company has permission to lay the old tracks on top of the paving for temporary use during the laying of the new tracks, but only two blocks in length can be torn up at one time.
