These could be pought at hargain figures, something like $4 each for guns that ordinarily cost $15. An order for the arms and ammunition was accordingly given, and they were shipped for Nicaragua and $75. 009 paid against the invoice. The cases arrived infact, and were secretly taken to the capital, for the President did not care about advertising his purchase. But when the boxes were opened, they were found to contain a choice assortment of scrap iron, brickbats, and paving stones. Mearagua is still looking for the agent who sold her the shipment of serms, but she has not found him, and is apt not to.
