SUMMER SOFA CUSHIONS.

Christmas Presents Made on the Porch These Summer Days.

Women who like to embroider are able to keep their linen closets stored with pretty things worked in designs suited to every season of the year. Thus, at Christmas time holly and mistletoe appear on table doilies, centerpieces and sofa pillows, and in summer roses, sweet peas and maidenhair hold sway.

The wealth of spring and summer blooms affords ample opportunity to the designer for making up appropriate patterns. The goldenrod centerpiece piece is a beautiful piece of work, following as it does most closely the rich golden tone of this typical American field flower. It is embroidered upon heavy linen with a cluny lace edge, and would make a handsome gift for the trousseau of an October bride. The harvest pillow has a great deal of red in its makeup, while the basket of roses on a French pillow is entirely of ribbon work. Every petal of the flowers is carefully applied in shades of rose colored ribbon, while the bow and loops are shaded blues and the basket itself is of brown. The whole is worked on natural colored canvas with a double ruffle of shaded blue satin ribbon.

This ribbon work is most effective when finished and is among the latest fancies of the embroidery lover. It is a fascinating pastime to build these intricate floral designs out of bits of ribbon. Cording and braiding are also satisfactory on covers and table pieces for hot weather. Neither one is difficult to do, and as summer work it is less hot and clumsy than regular embroidery or knitting.

The fad for hand embroidered lingerie and blouses has by no means done away with the necessity of looking after other articles which look the better for clever hand work. A woman cannot have too many table covers and sofa pillow tops, and she is wise enough to spend odd moments in looking after a supply for future or immediate use.

The Latest Coiffure.

A high dressing is still accounted the essence of smartness, and the favorite disposal of the moment takes the form of curls and loosely disposed coils with soft tendrils about the forehead, while a parting is usually indicated a little to the left side of front. Large ondules are the order of the day, and the pompadour is allowed to droop considerably over the brow, while the back is taken up with a sharp sweep, and the sides rolled back in graceful and becoming fashion.

The ingenue is faithful to her low dressing, but in lieu of that atrocious all round pompadour, held in subsection by three combs, the hair is parted in the center or a little to the left and puffed out and rolled back at the sides, when a pair of fancy combs come into prominent requisition. The remainder of the hair is then twisted into a figure of eight coil low down in the nape of the neck, the inevitable fine hair net keeping all in order, aided by two large round headed pins, or some girls dispense with these and elect to don a large black silk bow placed at the top of the coil.

Tortoise shell pins and combs form invaluable adjuncts to the modern coiffure. In fact, it is quite unusual to see a head undorned with these useful and ornamental details. Frequently for evening wear these are augmented by sprays of sequin leaves, birds and wings, while flowers and maidenhair fern are still permitted a place, though tinsel fancies strike the more advanced note.

Use Vegetables For Complexion.

It looks as though the beauty doctors must be in league with the market gardeners this summer, for they are down on cosmetics and evidently trying to kill them off. Patent complexion powders and face creams are almost entirely neglected by them in favor of various common vegetables, such as cucumber, lettuce, potatoes and carrots. "There is at present a perfect craze for vegetable cures for complexion blemishes," says a prominent beauty doctor. Freshly cut cucumbers laid against the face until the juice dries make the skin soft and velvety, she says, and grows enthusiastic about the result obtained. Potatoes and carrots are used in the same manner.

Co-operative Produce. Raisers of fruit and vegetables everywhere may be interested in an experiment set on foot at Spokane, Wash., says Country Gentleman. About 100 farmers around that town have formed an association, 1,000 shares, $100 each, to "handle the products of its members and sell to retail stores and jobbers; to unite the producer and distributor of farm, garden, poultry, dairy, orchard or other products more closely in their business relations in order that the goods produced may be delivered to the consumer at the least possible expense, graded in the best possible manner, in as good condition and with as little delay as possible, and in order to facilitate the handling of such products in both large and small quantities; to open up and develop a market for the surplus stock of the grower, thus keeping the home market steady; to assist in the development of the resources of our country and city."

Giving Names to Farms. A new law passed by the Missouri legislature encourages the naming of farms and protects the use of names adopted. It provides that upon the payment of a fee of $1 to the clerk of the county court the farmer in any county may secure a certificate setting forth the name and location of the farm and the name of the owner, and that when such name is properly registered it cannot be used as a designation for any other farm in such county.

There is more than a sentimental value to this legislation. The products of the dairy, orchard or stables of a farm may command a commercial premium after a reputation has been established. A distinctive name for an estate is much to be preferred to the present system of designation by section, township and range numbers.—Kansas Farmer.

KNOWING WATCH VALUES

KNOWING that a dollar's worth is not sold for 50c. KNOWING that it costs more to keep the doors of a store in a large city open than it does ours.

KNOWING that our expenses are lower at EVERY point than theirs we maintain that it is reasonable to suppose that our prices will be found as low as theirs. And as we buy from the same people as they do why shouldn't our goods be just as new and attractive as theirs?

KEEP THIS in mind when you are going to purchase a watch. We stand behind a stock of watches that invites comparisons from everybody—a stock that looks right and IS RIGHT.

BUT WE WOULD rather show you than tell you, therefore we will gladly welcome you any day.
