LAWSON AGAIN.

Against Roosevelt.

Thomas W. Lawson has issued a long public statement addressed to President Roosevelt, in which he gives his views on the present financial condition, the cause of it and his 'cure" which he asserts will restore public confidence and place the blame where it really belongs. The statement contains at the opening a set of 20 items of information, in which Lawson charges that the "system" is responsible, and that it is now planning the downfall of the President by forcing him into an un Oregon and California Land Co. to tenable position. He declares that Oregon and California Ry. Co., lots the people of the country will demand the re-election of Roosevelt, and that U. S. to Gilbert H. In the third part of his statement Mr. Lawson cites several instances in support of his charges. One of these is that on the second day of the swi4 of nwi4 and sig of sig of sig of panic $15,000,000 in currency was taken from a conservative bank to a trust company and paid out to depositors in one day.

Toward the end of his statement he gives his "cure," which he declares is cada, n sec. 21, town 3s, range 4e, the only way to restore confidence. It is as follows:

'By the exposure now of the losses sec. 28, and sw 4 sec 21, Franklin of the people that have already been made at the depositories, banks and trust companies, and the assumption of these losses now by those who are morally responsible for them, if such C. There is but one practical way for this to be done, and that way is for you, the one man in whose honesty, wisdom and courage the American people and the thinking people of Europe have unbounded confidence, to appoint, in your capacity as President, if it can legally be done-if not officially, personally, for public opin-ion will overwhelmingly support you in such a move-a board or committee of five or six men of unquestioned character and intelligence, such men as Governor Hughes, of New York, and Governor Johnson, of Minnesota, and have these men at once hold public court on two questions;

LASTING FAME FOR MEEKER.

Proposal to Name Great Transcontinental Highway After Him.

It would be a fitting reward for his services if Ezra Meeker's name should be bestowed on a cement roadway from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean. The man drove to the far Northwest many years ago, following the Oregon trail-or helping to make it. In the present year he has driven East to New York and later to Washington with his ox team and covered wagon. His plan is to interest the Government in the making of a highway across the continent. His driving does not add anything to the evidences of its need. But his feat has had the effect of calling attention to the need of such a road. And in the common acceptance of that sentiment lies the hope that it may be built.

They tell us that the automobile industry has only begun; that the cars for next year will be bigger than ever before; that driving about in America becomes more and more the purpose of the people owning such

Linn county has one school without a single boy pupil and another which no girls attend. Of course both are in small remote districts. District 84, in Fox Valley, near Lyons, has eight pupils, all of whom are boys, and District 119, near Sweet Home, has only five students and all are girls. Miss Vida Nanney, a graduate of the normal department of Albany College last year, is the teacher in the former district while the five girls in the latter district are instructed by Miss essie Parsons.

The Albany Herald says construction work will commence soon on the extension of the Willamette Valley Company's electric road from Salem south to Albany, and the line will be put in operation as soon as possible.

"You knew, then, that I would ask you?"

The girl drew herself up with a stately manner and replied: "Since you do not spare me why should I save you? Yes, I knew that you would."

"Americans do not know the meaning of home," sneered the count. "I you, Miss Short, because-well, it does not matter now. I am sorry I asked you, and I trust you will never regret your answer. You will hear of me again." And with a stiff bow he left once more on the plazzi slowly back and forth. It was a beau- selfish tiful night, a night for happiness, not for tears, and why should she cry? Yet tears would come to her eyes. She did not love the man who had just left her, and she did love some one else. She did not want a German home nor a German husband, and she resented his attack on the American home. She leaned forward on the rail and sighed. A shot rang through the stillness of the night air, followed by a piercing scream. In an instant the conservative patrons of Elwood inn became a clamorevery direction. The men rushed this way and that, and in a few moments the lifeless form of a woman was carried into the hotel lobby. Miss Short had been shot in the back, perhaps fatally, and her slayer was still at large. While the doctors worked over the injured girl searching parties were organized to find the assassin. The grounds were carefully guarded, detectives were called in and went through their usual methods of cross questioning the employees of the hotel, and hours dragged by with no trace of the man who had fired the shot. Bulletins were issued from time to time regarding the condition of the patient, and by morning symptoms showed that there was a chance for her recovery.

With the recovery of consciousness came speech, and her first rambling words were, "Oh, how could be!" An anxious mother leaned over her and gently said: "Who, Eleanor, dear?"

The injured girl gasped, "The count!" and again lapsed into unconsciousness. But one count had been at the hotel, and it did not take long to find him in his room and place him under arrest. He was placed under heavy bail until Miss Short either recovered to face

Days intervened while the patient hung between life and death, but finally she began to pick up the broken threads and was well on the road to recovery. Her mother, sitting by the bedside of the girl, fondly caressing her, said:

"Jack has been here every day, dear, asking and pleading to see you, and we have promised that he shall be the first. Can you see him today? The poor boy is almost frantic."

"Yes, mother; I want to see him whenever you say I may."

"He has been walting in the other room for two hours, so I will call him." A well built, brown faced man appeared at the door in answer to the mother's call and knelt down by the side of the girl, slipping one strong arm about her shoulders and nestling his brouzed face close to hers,

"Dear heart!" he murmured. "Why, Jack, mother is here looking at us!" said Eleanor as the color came to her pale checks.

"Your mother knows all about it, dear. Haven't I been telling her every day for the past two weeks? If she don't know it it's not my fault. You see, I couldn't tell you, so I had to tell some one and thought your mother a safe repository for confidences. But you mustn't talk, dear. You are just to get well, and then I'm going to take you away for months and months-

Eleanor proved a good patient, and each day found her stronger than the one gone by. "I remember now, but that was yesterday," she said as she nestled closer to him. "That was a whole twentyfour hours ago."

"Dear heart," he said, with a smile, "as each twenty-four hours elapse I love you that much more. You know that, dear, and I don't see why we have to wait until you get entirely well. Why not be married quietly, right here in this little room, where we have been so happy with each other, and let me nurse you back to health?" "Why, Jack, you selfish man! Not have a wedding, no bridesmalds and if you fail to so appear and answer, no long, white satin dress with a train! Oh, how could you even suggest it? But if you want me to I will, dear, for when you go far away from isting between plaintiff and defenme the whole light seems to go out dant herein and giving plaintiff an abof my life, and it's been dark such a long time."

Jack's answer was to take her in his strong arms and hold her close to his heart for a moment as he whispered "Darling!"

"Jack," Eleanor murmured, "I want to ask you a question that has been on my mind ever since I regained consciousness. I wanted to ask mother, but feared to worry her. But if you will hold me tight I will ask you."

"What is it, dear?" answered Jack. "Who shot me?" And her eyes closed as she asked the dreaded question.

"The poor count did not do it. I happened to be coming up the grounds that night as he left you, and I stopped to watch him. He walked down the front steps and sauntered over to the big elm tree at the south end of the grounds, when from the bushes the form of a woman appeared, and in an instant she leveled a pistol and shot at him. She missed him and the bullet struck you. It all came out in a few could not have gone without asking days. It has since come to light that the woman was his wife, whom he deserted in Germany."

"Oh, Jack: What suffering that wicked man has caused?"

"Yes. But he opened my eyes to

Gold in Chicken's Crop.

Mrs. Louis Jhonson, of Freewater, Ore., two years ago heard of a woman finding gold unggets in a chicken's crop. Ever since Mrs. Johnson has been hunting for gold in every chicken she killed, and Wednesday before Thanksgiving her perseverance was rewarded. She was dressing chickens for Thanksgiving dinner ous crowd, surging on the plazza from and found a piece of gold the size of a pea in the gizzard of one. Mrs. Johnson is much elated over her find. Mr. Johnson has been hauling sand from the Walla Walla river a few miles below Milton for his chickens to scratch in, and that is how the gold is accounted for.
