Will Teddy Go Up In the Air?

He Went Down in a Submarine, and the Army Balloons May Yet A-lure Him Aloft.

Brigadier General James Allen, Who Is Planning a Fleet of Fighting Airships For Uncle Sam.

A LITTLE more than a year ago President Roosevelt created something of a sensation by taking a trip in a naval submarine vessel beneath the waters of Long Island sound. There was naturally some anxiety as to what might befall the chief magistrate of the nation down in the water's depths, but it was slight as compared with what would be felt should the strenuous head of the government take a trip in the clouds to test the value of air navigation for military and naval purposes. There has been talk in Washington that the president might favor the army aeronauts as he did the naval submarine men if congress decides on the creation of a war fleet for the air. Premier Clemenceau of France and the minister of war recently made an ascension in a government balloon. Experts who have visited Europe and observed what Great Britain, France and Germany are doing in this direction say that the United States is far behind other countries in the matter of applying air navigation to warfare.

The importance of the United States keeping up with the procession in the matter of aerial science as connected with warfare was emphasized at the international aeronautical congress, which met in New York at the conclusion of the aerial carnival at St. Louis. Prominent among the speakers at this congress were members of the United States army who have given special study to aeronautics. One of these, Major George O. Squires, who has had charge of the government balloon experiments at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., said: "The success of aerial navigation has been established, and the success of aerial navigation means the introduction of new and radical methods in warfare, extended possibilities of producing decisive results by strategic movements against untenable positions rather than by loss of human life. It means the ultimate passing away of warfare in the present sense and the eventual dawn of the era of peace."

The big government balloon United States, piloted by Major Henry B. Hersey, who went to Spitzbergen with Wellman, expecting to sail from there for the pole by the air route, was among the balloons which sailed in the contest for the James Gordon Bennett cup. It landed in Canada. Captain Charles DeForest Chandler was another army aeronaut who competed for the cup, and it was he who sailed the balloon America from St. Louis to West Virginia in the race for the Spanish-American war, graduated from West Point in 1872 and spent three years with the Third cavalry in Wyoming. He was then detached for signal service and remained in that branch of the army until 1878. He saw service later in New Mexico and Indian Territory and on the staffs of Generals Miles, Ruger and Merritt, besides being an instructor at West Point for several years. He succeeded General Greely as chief signal officer in 1904. Fort Omaha is balloon headquarters for the army, and instruction in military aeronautics will be given at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

soon on their way to London. There they encountered difficulties on account of the insistence of the authorities that the divorce certificate be produced before a marriage ceremony was performed. Obstacles were at last removed, and they were married at the registry office, a witness being the noted author, William Le Queux.

Word Derivations.
"Disaster" is an astrological term meaning "unfavorable star," one of the many words that astrology has bequeathed to the English language. "Predominant," "ill starred," "in the ascendant," are other instances, not to speak of the expression "My stars!" Even "influence" is really astrological, signifying the flowing in upon human affairs of the power of some heavenly body. "Petrel" and "petrol" both descend from "petra," a rock. "Petrol" comes directly enough through "petroleum," rock oil, but "petrel" through St. Peter, after whom the bird was named because it appeared to walk upon the waves.

The Wheelbarrow.
The farmer's son looked up from the sporting page.
"By heck," he said, "I wish we had one o' them there hossless carriages."
"We have," returned the farmer, "and now that you mention it, you might jest as well git it and fetch up a load o' turnips from the three acre lot."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Courage.
"Henry is a brave man. The other night his wife thought she heard a burglar."
"And he went down?"
"No. He had the courage to tell her he was afraid."—Circle.

The Turning of the Worm.
Mollie—I wish you were more like Mr. Simpson. Coddie—My dear, if I were more like Mr. Simpson, I should have married a woman more like Mrs. Simpson.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Solicitude.
"Why are you so extremely solicitous about the preservation of trees?" asked the art expert.

"Well," answered the man whose tastes in sculpture are somewhat restricted, "it seems to me that trees are frequently very desirable things for statuary to hide behind."—Washington Star.

A Crisis and a Craze.
There are two forces which cause modern England to move—a crisis and a craze. It is far less necessary to do something that is great now in this country than it is to do something that will attract the attention of a great many. The circumstances might have had a curious effect on the celebrated of the past could they have delayed existing until now. For instance, Shakespeare today would probably have had to attempt to swim the channel to sustain the attention of playgoers, Cromwell might have found it advisable to take trips in a "navigable balloon" to keep himself before the general public, Garrick might have elected to descend from the skies in a parachute to advertise himself satisfactorily, and it might have been necessary for the beautiful Duchess of Devonshire, to maintain her social reputation, to figure occasionally in the divorce court. Motor accidents, thefts of jewelry and of other property, fires and civil and criminal actions are, of course, more important elements in the building up and maintaining of a "reputation" among us now than is mere excellence.—London Truth.

Explosion by Music.
One of the most dangerous of all explosives is a black powder called iodide of nitrogen. When it is dry the slightest touch will often cause it to explode with great violence. There appears to be a certain rate of vibration which this compound cannot resist. In experiments to determine the cause of its extreme explosiveness some damp iodide of nitrogen was rubbed on the strings of a bass viol. It is known that the strings of such an instrument will vibrate when those of a similar instrument having an equal tension are played upon. In this case, after the explosive had become thoroughly dry upon the strings, another bass viol was brought near and the strings sounded. At a certain note the iodide of nitrogen on the prepared instrument exploded. It was found that the explosion occurred only when a rate of vibration of sixty a second was communicated to the prepared strings. Vibration of the G string caused an explosion, while that of the E string had no effect.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Everything in Proportion.
For many weeks the irritable merchant had been riveted to his bed by typhoid fever. Now he was convalescing. He clamored for something to eat, declaring that he was starving.
"Tomorrow you may have something to eat," promised the doctor. The merchant realized that there would be a restraint to his appetite, yet he saw in vision a modest steaming meal placed at his bedside.
"Here is your dinner," said the nurse next day as she gave the glowing patient a spoonful of tapioca pudding, "and the doctor emphasizes that everything else you do must be in the same proportion."
Two hours later the nurse heard a frantic call from the bedchamber.
"Nurse," breathed the man heavily, "I want to do some reading. Bring me a postage stamp."—Harper's Weekly.

Force of a Cyclone.
Careful estimate of the force of a cyclone and the energy required to keep a hurricane in active operation reveals the presence of a power that makes the mightiest efforts of man appear as nothing in comparison. A force equal to more than 400,000,000 horsepower was estimated as developed in a West Indian cyclone. This greatly exceeds the power that could be developed by all the muscles within the range of man's capabilities. Were steam, water, windmills and the strength of all men and animals combined they could not even approach the tremendous force of this mighty power.—Chicago Journal.

ROMANCE IN HIGH LIFE.

The Adventures of Ex-Crown Princess Louise, Now Signora Toselli.
The history of royalty furnishes few cases like that of the ex-Crown Princess Louise of Saxony, who recently wedded the Italian teacher and composer of music, Signor Enrico Toselli.

SIGNOR AND SIGNORA TOSELLI.

In London, Signora Toselli might have been a queen now had her domestic relations at the Saxon court been to her taste. But she and the crown prince, now King Frederick, did not agree, and a little less than five years ago she fled from the palace under the escort of her brother, the Archduke Leopold Ferdinand. At Geneva, Switzerland, she joined the young French tutor, Giron, who had been taken into her husband's service the previous summer. The crown prince got a divorce, and shortly after the decree had been issued a girl was born to the crown princess, the Princess Anne Monica Pia. The affair with Giron did not last. He went to Brussels, where he is now bank clerk.
About a year ago the former crown princess was presented to Signor Toselli at the Villa Montauto, in Florence, and their acquaintance soon developed into more than simple friendship.
Last July, after surmounting many obstacles, the couple left Florence quietly in an automobile one day, took a train at a small station and were
