STATEMENT NO. 1.

What is a Republican?
Is he a man who votes the Republican ticket?
If not, what kind of a Republican is he?

This is rather a pertinent question at this time, and will be more pertinent before the State and county election next June.

The Republican party of Clackamas County, at the primary nominating election in April, will place before the people of Clackamas County a set of men for the various offices to be filled. These offices embrace three candidates for the Legislature. The members of the Legislature will be called upon to elect a United States Senator next January. Assuming that the Legislature will have a Republican majority, it follows that it should elect a United States Senator who is a Republican. Assuming that a majority of the members of the Legislature sign Statement No. 1, it follows that they will vote for the candidate for United States Senator who receives the majority of the votes of the people of Oregon at the June election. Assuming that this man shall be a Democrat, then the Republican majority of the Legislature will elect a Democrat to the United States Senate.

How does this fit your stomach, you Republicans?

Does this appeal to you, who have been Republicans from the cradle; you who are Republicans from principle; you who believe that the policies of Theodore Roosevelt must be carried out? If you elect a Democrat United States Senator, will that man go to Washington and uphold Republican policies and principles?

Put your thinking cap on and consider this matter.
You men of Clackamas County who are going to become candidates for the Legislature on the Republican ticket, will you subscribe to Statement No. 1, and thus be pledged to go to Salem and vote for a man who may be a Democrat? Can you do this and still be a Republican? How do you think your fellow Republicans will like it if you do? How is your backbone, and your reasoning power and your general Republicanism, anyhow?

RODGERS MAKES A SPEECH.

George Rodgers, of Salem, does not pose as a "funny" man. He is a man of business, but he found time, two years ago, to serve the people of his county in the State Legislature. He also found time to get himself elected Mayor of Salem. But at the bottom, he is a business man. He is small in stature, but not mentally so. In business he is very successful. In the State Legislature he made a good record, and he is one of the best Mayors Salem ever had. One day, during the last session of the Legislature, Mr. Rodgers made a speech on the Corrupt Practices Act that the Legislature defeated. This same measure is now before the people of Oregon through the initiative, and will be on the ballot at the June election. Every voter will have a chance to read this bill before election day. Mr. Voter, when you read it you will wonder what you have ever done to be placed in a chicken coop through the instrumentality of what is known as the People's Power League. Corrupt practices sounds good, but here is an extract from the speech that Mr. Rodgers made more than a year ago:

"If, in the fever of your candidacy, you should offer your friend Pete a chew of tobacco, it becomes your solemn duty to impress well upon his mind that no relation between the chew and your candidacy should be entertained for a moment. It would be absolutely within the law, however, to emphasize your earnest regard for him and dwell upon the cherished memories of old days when, as boys, you used to paddle mud cakes with his second cousin."

Cut out this little piece and paste it in your hat. You will probably recognize its drift after you read the bill, if you are not familiar with it now.

"LACK OF EXPERIENCE."

It now appears that Thomas J. Cleeton, endorsed by the Oregon delegation for the Office of United States District Attorney for Oregon, is to have no more plain sailing than did Mr. Schuebel. There seems to be something about Mr. Cleeton's political history that bars his progress. Perhaps it is his lack of experience in the Federal courts. This was one of the arguments used against the confirmation of Mr. Schuebel. Mr. Cleeton, until recent years, was a resident of St. Helena, which is in the Fifth judicial district, presided over by Hon. Thomas A. McBride. Mr. Cleeton was District Attorney for a time. He is a good lawyer, but not a brilliant man. If appointed and confirmed he would probably hold down the job, even as Mr. Schuebel would have done. But, after all, when it is considered that since Judge McBride went on the bench he has tried about 2200 cases, and of these only 44 have been appealed to a higher court, it is only proper to ask how it is possible for the attorneys of his district to gain experience in even the State Supreme Court. As a matter of fact, any ordinary attorney with a well-trained legal mind, is perfectly capable of conducting a case in the Federal courts. The method of procedure differs little from other courts, and "lack of experience" is an easy "argument" to use to accomplish a political end.

Those over-anxious people who have feared that President Roosevelt would fall below that high dignity with which he has hitherto invested his office now see that their fears were wholly unfounded, and if there are any who are still in doubt, let them carefully peruse the recent message to Congress and they cannot but be pleased with its poise, good sense and terse writing. This message will make the President stronger than he was before, as we believe that the country is back of the Roosevelt policies and that the further steps which he proposes will be ratified by public sentiment. These views are the legacy of Mr. Roosevelt's administration to the administrations which are to follow, and while they may not find expression in legislation this year, or next, or even the year following, they contain seed which is bound to bear forth good fruit in years to come. They are, therefore, of permanent value and deserve the careful and thoughtful consideration of the American people.

Secretary Garfield, in his annual report, recommends that the Government retain title to the extensive coal lands in the West and in Alaska which are still within the public domain, and that their development be permitted under leases, as is the practice in Australia. In the some of the Western States and in the East, where the coal lands are owned by private individuals. This plan is part of the great general policy of the conservation of the National resources of forest, mine, waterways, and water power that President Roosevelt is endeavoring to develop along systematic lines. But unless Mr. Roosevelt or his immediate successor can force the appropriate legislation from an unwilling Congress, there is every prospect that the serious blunder of permitting the monopolization of the Western coal fields will be committed.

Senator Bailey, of Texas, was a staunch supporter of the Aldrich bill. Then he heard that he was being criticized in his State; he immediately became sponsor for a bill providing for 1,000 millions of greenbacks. Mr. Bailey is a shrewd enough politician to know that one of the surest ways to defeat a measure is to make it ridiculous. Unfortunately for his party, there are many Democrats who do not see through Bailey.

A poll of the Senate showed, out of 50 Republican Senators in Washington, 29 for Taft, 4 for Knox, 2 for Hughes, 2 for Fairbanks, 2 for Cannon and 2 for La Follette. It would be interesting to know how the various Senators voted, but such polls are made in confidence. The totals may be published, but the way an individual Senator votes may not.

Recent decisions of the Supreme Court should demonstrate to organized labor that its real friends are not the men who are willing to pass any law the unions ask for, but those legislators who tell the unions frankly what is and what is not constitutional and who refuse to enact such laws which will not stand the test of the courts.

Of all the developments of the Federal Government, none is so promising as that which has for its object the conservation of our timber resources. It is a great work and will stand as an enduring monument to the unbounded energy of President Roosevelt.

Of all the guessing contests ever inaugurated, the most popular seems to be the disposition of the present occupant of the White House after March 4th, 1909. The latest answer is a place in the Cabinet.

It is a noteworthy fact that New York has never yet secured the nomination of the man for whom she is instructed her delegation, Reid, Hill and many others could testify to this to their sorrow.

Senator Tillman is writing a book. Will that be printed on asbestos paper and served with hand grenades?

THE CANBY SALOON JUDGMENT.

(Portland Telegram.)
Without knowledge of all the facts as they came to the attention of the court, without judicial weighing of all the circumstances as the court undoubtedly weighed them, it would neither be just nor expedient to say that insufficient penalty was imposed on the Canby saloonmen, who pleaded guilty to selling liquor to a minor, in a case where the offense had resulted in tragedy.

Yet, regarding this case as the report of it has been given to the public, one can hardly avoid the conclusion that a fine of $175 to be paid by each of the guilty parties is poor compensation to the State for the loss of a life, and is not a punishment of that rigorous character calculated to prevent similar offense. Liquor was sold to a mere boy, whom the saloonmen knew to be a minor. They knew the act to be in violation of law. The consequences of it were fatal. The boy drank immoderately of the stuff that was dished out at this Canby drinking place. He became helplessly drunk, and strangled to death while in that condition. It would seem that, under the law of any State, wherein there was proper safeguarding of irresponsible and easily influenced youth, an unlawful act and its fatal consequences should be more closely coupled up than appears in this Canby case.

Whatever was the controlling consideration in the mind of the court, the penalty imposed in this case will appeal to the general public as ridiculously insufficient. It carries no great measure of assurance and comfort into the home which this character of crime may render desolate at any time. It makes no such example as, in the popular conception of justice, the gravity of the case demands.

Forbes is Oregon Coach.

Forbes is one of the greatest football men that the country has produced. His gridiron career began at Wesleyan University, where he played guard and tackle during the seasons of 1902 and 1903, and was elected captain for the season of 1904. He did not return to college, however, but entered Yale, where the years' residence rule prevented him from winning a place on the varsity. He made the team as left tackle in 1905, and his work was of such a high order that many critics gave him a place on their All-American teams. In 1906 Forbes was moved out to end, where he played a most sensational game.

Rejected.

Some months ago the city council of Fairbault, Minn., appointed a committee to investigate the local lighting plant with a view to purchasing it. Finding that it was just about self sustaining and that municipal ownership offered no prospect of any saving to the city or private consumers, the committee made an adverse report, which was unanimously adopted.

Politicians are often men who, not being able to manage their own affairs, are not deterred thereby from taking charge of those of the government. Reception at Albright Home.

Regret over the approaching departure of Mr. and Mrs. Charles O. Albright and family for Hood River, after a long residence in Oregon City, was marked Monday night by a reception tendered them at their home by the members of the Ladies Aid Society of the First Congregational Church. The interior decorations were tastefully arranged and nearly 50 people were present, most of them old time friends of the family, to bid farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Albright and to wish them happiness and success in their new home. The gift of a set of silver forks was not the least pleasing feature of the affair, and the evening was merrily spent with games and in conversation and a toothsome luncheon was served. Mr. Albright has purchased a fruit farm at Hood River and leaves in a few weeks with his family for the home of the luscious apple and the palatable strawberry. Among the guests were:

Mr. and Mrs. George Broughton, Mr. and Mrs. Thoma, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie L. Porter, Miss Constance Holland, Charles E. Burns, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Blum, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Greenman, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Deutsche Verein Masquerade.

The masquerade ball given Saturday night by the Deutsche Verein of Oregon City, was a great success, there being over 100 couples masked, while a great many more danced after the unmasking. There were a great variety of costumes, both fancy and comic, and many tasteful and original ideas were shown in their styles. Miss Florence Seller received the ladies' first prize, a silk umbrella, her costume being that of a German lass. The gentlemen's prize was awarded to Joseph Meunch, masked as a Dutch burgomaster. H. W. Streibig and Jas. Partlow received the comic prizes, the former as "Mother Grundy," the latter as "Uncle Sam." "The Flying Dutchman," and the "Finger Polka," two old-time German dances, were danced and enjoyed by Germans and Americans alike. Music was furnished by Toelle's orchestra.

The crystal celebration was a particularly enjoyable affair and the guests numbered 25. Music, conversation and games passed the evening and delicious refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Boyer, who were married in the east, received many gifts of glassware.

EGGS TAKE SLIGHT DROP.

Produce From Country is Coming in Slowly.

A scarcity of hay, and a slight drop in the price of eggs are about the only apparent changes in the market report since last week. There is not a great deal of produce being brought to this city, but the prices still manage to hold their own. Eggs have dropped from 22½ and 25 cents to 21 and 23 cents a dozen. Apples that sold last week for 75 cents and $1 a box are now commanding from $1 to $1.25, with a prospect for another jump. Hay and grain are selling at the prices quoted last week, although there is a scarcity of hay in the local market. The same conditions exist with live stock, poultry and dressed meat, the only difference being a slight rise in the price of dressed veal.
