Jack Howell and his friend Arthur Lewis, who lately arrived at William Harris' saw mill from Caerphilly, have left the saw mill work and have gone to Clem, Oregon, to try working on a farm.

They move from one job to the other; first they try herding sheep and then they try following a four-mile team harrowing wheat on the thousand-acre farm of Mr. Wilkins. "Oh Jack will make a teamster yet."

The people around Beaver Creek liked Jack very much and they miss his smiling face. They hope to see him back there before long, but they are all afraid he will take a notion to go back to his old home in Caerphilly before he goes back to Beaver Creek.

George Strong has been quite busy clearing his farm the last week.

Oscar May, wife and family spent Sunday visiting with relatives in Sellwood.
