Sue for Towing Logs.
C. Pembroke and W. T. Murphy have filed a suit against R. J. Duncan and the Doernbecher Manufacturing Company. It is alleged that the plaintiffs made an agreement with Duncan to tow logs between Albany and Oregon City for $10 per day, the defendant to pay for the fuel. They worked 49 days, for $490, and paid $20 for fuel and their total bill was $520, of which only $154 has been paid, leaving a balance of $366. Pembroke and Murphy say that the logs were cut into veneering lumber and taken to the Coasco sawmill, one mile North of New Era and piled in tiers along the railroad track. The Doernbecher Lumber Company claims to have some interest in the lumber, and the plaintiffs ask that the material be sold in order to satisfy their claim for $366 and attorneys fees.

SHUBEL

Albert Moehnke had quite an accident on his way home from town last Saturday evening. Near what is known as Cape Horn on the Beeson hill, the road is scarcely wide enough for two teams to pass and there is no railing along the dangerous side. Another team was coming from the opposite direction, and one horse being nervous, a collision took place with the result that both teams, including everybody in the wagons went down the bluff. Albert's buggy was broken nearly to splinters, his horse crippled, and the persons more or less bruised. That no lives were lost is a miracle, as this is one of the steepest and most dangerous passes in Clackamas County, and why our County Court has failed to put up a railing is a mystery, and it seems to us they should be held criminally responsible for any accidents that occur from their negligence.
