

WOMAN'S COLUMN

EDITED BY OREGON CITY WOMAN'S CLUB.

FLOWERS.

With the month of June comes the roses which are as fine as can be grown in any state of the union. That pioneer, the Mission rose while not equal to the so called "Oregon Rose" Caroline Testrut in her gorgeous beauty, far exceeds it in fragrance. Her dainty modest flowers were held very dear by our pioneers. By some the Mission rose is held to be the ancestor of the finest ever blooming roses we now have.

The rose is called the Queen of flowers, no other flower presents as many varied characteristics as this regal queen.

When Portland wanted a spring festival she showed her wisdom by naming it a Rose Carnival; no other name would have been as attractive to all classes of people.

The person who has a tiny lawn can have as beautiful roses as the neighbor who lives in a palace.

Love of flowers is probably the most universal love that exists.

The Clackamas County Rose and Carnation Society, composed mostly of women, is doing much to encourage the cultivation of roses. Reports from all parts of the county show that roses and other flowers are being cultivated, where no attention has been paid in former years.

Last year the Rose and Strawberry exhibit was largely attended and much interest taken. This year the exhibit will be more complete and it is expected that the results will be seen in the hundreds of roses that will be planted this fall, next week we hope to take up the wild flowers.

Pansies.

Pansies require a rich, heavy soil with plenty of moisture, and a situation not too sunny or too shady, but just about as much of one as the other. In a situation like this they do their best, and are a glory all the year even, sometimes showing their faces above the snow. They require to be cut freely, and are beautiful arranged in shallow dishes, unmixed with green or other flowers. Seeds should be sown every other year, as the old plants live only two years.

Protect Shade Trees.

There is rank injustice as well as shortsightedness in the manner in which telegraph, electric light and telephone companies are allowed to mutilate shade trees along our streets and public highways. People who have pride in their towns, pride in their homes, set out trees along their sidewalks; in many cases these have been growing for years, tenderly nurtured and cared for until they are a pleasure alike to the owner and every pedestrian who finds comfort beneath their shade. Then comes an electric company, gets a franchise to run its lines along certain streets, which in its estimation conveys the right to carry destruction with it, and its tree butchers are set to work destroying trees which have taken years to grow, and if any protest is made by the owner he is frequently met with jeers and insults from the paid agents of a corporation which owes its existence to the people. Under our laws no individual has authority to cut down or mutilate any shade tree growing along the highway, even though that tree was planted by himself and grows in front of his own residence. To be within the letter of the law he must obtain the consent of the street superintendent or the road overseer before he can even prune his own trees. Yet these electrical vandals are permitted to hack and destroy trees before any man's property, where they choose to run their lines, and he has no redress. It is sincerely to be hoped that a long suffering public will yet awaken to its rights in this matter and compel these corporations to respect them.

A justice in a New York City court recently fined two firms of contractors who were charged with destroying and damaging trees while engaged in laying water mains. They had both placed hoisting engines where the smoke and heat scorched the branches. In a New England town at about the same time two Italians were sent to the county jail for injuring a row of freshly planted shade trees on a public street.

Perhaps from these small beginnings there may sweep over the country a movement for the better protection of our municipal shade trees. The time may come when telephone, telegraph and electric lighting companies will be denied the right to mangle the trees whose tops interfere with the wires.

Towns that advertise their beauty to attract the tourist may as wisely follow the example of Stockbridge, Mass., that is refusing to have electric light until a company can be found that will agree to lay its wires in conduits under the streets.

Flowers in the Kitchen.

I wonder if many tired housekeepers know what a restful calming influence comes from a bouquet of fresh flowers placed in the kitchen window. Not long since I gathered a bunch of bright hued Nasturtiums and set them in the window facing the east, over the sink. Their lovely faces looking into mine, made the morning hours slip by, freighted though they were with cumbering duties unheeded. Of course all housekeepers do not work in the kitchen themselves, but even for servants—would it not be a wise measure to put into their lives a simple uplift such as this?

A meeting of the Woman's Club was held Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Bruce Zumwalt. The afternoon was devoted to the discussion of the department work for next year. There was a large attendance and great interest shown in this branch of the club work. The Club voted to hold its annual meeting next week instead of the fourth Wednesday of June, due notice of which will be given later.

MUCH CONCERN IS FELT.

Ordinary Methods for Treating Catarrh Prove Unsuccessful.

Written statistics that show an increase in catarrh have shaken confidence in the usual prescriptions to safeguard human health from the ravages of this disease.

When stomach dosing was proven ineffective it was natural to look for some other treatment, and it is believed that in Hyomel an absolute cure for all catarrhal troubles has at last been found. Inhaled with the air you breathe, its healing medication reaches every part of the nose and throat, and soothes the irritated mucous membrane so that relief is almost instant, while lasting cure is practically sure to follow.

The complete Hyomel outfit costs but $1.00, and is sold by Huntley Bros. Co., under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it does not give satisfaction.
