CLACKAMAS DOES HER PART.

Old Clackamas surprised the natives last Tuesday by rolling up a plurality of more than 900 for Taft and Sherman. The Republicans voted their ticket, except in Oregon City, where hundreds of laboring men evidently listened to the loud noise, as impregnated by Sam Gompers, and cast their ballots for The People's. The Democrats certainly had us all bluffed in Oregon, with their estimates of less than 15,000 for Taft, who will carry the state by probably 25,000.

The farming vote did the business. There has been a time in the history of this Republic when the farmer has been in such a prosperous condition as now. The increased cost of living does not affect him to the extent that it reaches the man who lives in the city. Yet the farmer reaps all the benefit from the good prices for the products of the soil and it is small wonder, indeed, that he is satisfied, and has no desire for a change.

Once in a while we fall from grace and elect a Democratic county official who has a large personal following and whose popularity is greater than that of the Republican. This was the case in Clackamas county, where a Democratic candidate for Governor, and last June we made an everlasting spectacle of ourselves by nominating a Republican State Senator, and last September we elected a Democrat. This was the result of a campaign of Republicanism with a vengeance.

But on national affairs it is all different. The country is prosperous. The people are satisfied. They are afraid of Bryan and his untried theories. They have nothing to fear from the personal choice of Theodore Roosevelt.

Now the Democrats are trembling in the fear that the prodigious Republican vote in Oregon will be the signal for the abandonment of the Statement No. 1 pledge, but they really have nothing to worry about. These Statement Owners will find it hard to backslide. They took the pill with their eyes wide open, with the warnings of the Republican press in their ears, and they will find it hard, very hard, to dash the cup away.

GOOD ROADS.

The Romans were the greatest road builders the world has ever seen. From the earliest times they saw the necessity of having easy and safe means of communication between all the cities of Italy and later, as they acquired provinces in France, Germany and England, they saw the greater need of good roads over which to transport their munitions of war, foodstuffs to garrisons and armies and army trains.

Bring one of those old warriors over to America today and let him take a look at our roads. He would wonder

If it were possible for a civilized country to carry anything over some of our roads. In the spring and fall the roads in many places are impassable, making the farmers the prey of speculators who know that they can safely boost the price of certain commodities because, although the crop is plentiful, nevertheless it is not available for the market on account of bad roads.

The good roads commission now meeting in Paris should furnish Americans with a good many practical ideas and the results of the commission will be watched with interest.

THE INCREASE IN POPULATION.

In an address delivered at the conference of governors in Washington the prediction was made that the United States will in 1950 have a population of more than 200,000,000. This was based on an annual increase of about 1 1/2 per cent, plus the average annual immigration of 750,000.

There is no question as to the diminishing rate of natural increase, but if the present population is 85,000,000 there will certainly be added to it more than 45,000,000 in the next forty-two years, unless natural growth is stopped altogether, and that is not probable. There will be an increase in that time of quite 20,000,000 from immigration, and it is not unreasonable to assume that there will be not less than 40,000,000 from natural growth.

The population of the United States will reach 150,000,000 by the middle of the present century, and it is not likely to halt there.

BIG CANAL HALF DONE.

To make the Panama Canal there were at the beginning 80,638,248 cubic yards of earth and rock to be excavated for a half canal. The American government's force in the four years from May, 1904, to May, 1908, excavated 18,445,426 cubic yards, and of this the major part, or 11,191,488 cubic yards, was excavated in the last twelve months of that period. Including the French excavations, there remain, therefore, only 29,652,322 cubic yards to excavate, or less than one-half of the whole.

10,000 HOMICIDES A YEAR.

The homicides of this country number over ten thousand a year. They are much more numerous than in other countries of comparative population. Our laws and judges and jurors and lawyers are to blame for this condition of things. Nearly three months ago, a captain in the United States army murdered Mr. Annis as he came out defenseless from a bath in the waters of New York Bay.

It was two months before the Grand Jury brought an indictment in the case and it is probable that a year may elapse before the case is tried and the murderer probably acquitted. It is very different from this in the country from which we derive our laws and institutions. In England there is no unwritten law. Emotional insanity is unknown. If an Englishman's family is invaded by a seducer, he goes to law over it and society approves him and the invader of his home is ostracized, and as well as murdered in every man's mind. We, too, may become a civilized country in time, but until then it is remarkable that many wealthy Americans prefer to emigrate to England and continental countries where there is protection to life and property?

Notwithstanding the progress and excitement in navigating the air by balloons and aeroplanes, it is not believed by level-headed men that the project will ever be practically or commercially successful. Stubborn facts, however, will not and should not prevent experimentation. There is other than commercial and practical success. The airship or the aeroplane at sea, enabling a fleet by an ascension to be advised of the proximity of an enemy fifty or a hundred miles distant; the same use of the airship on land with reference to an army, will result in a great economy of both life and money, in scouting and reconnoitering.

Just before the Civil War, this country was fourth in rank of wealth. England, France and Germany then outranked the United States. Now our wealth exceeds that of any two of them and our manufacturers all three of them.

KEEP IT UP.

Look pleasant when the picture gun is pointed at your face. And when the kind photographer has everything in place. And should you want to keep it up it would not be a crime. To can your frowning features and look pleasant all the time.

Why should you all the living day appear as one who had a grouch against your fellow men. Or something quite as bad. And when you tell the picture man to make your photograph. Try to look pleasant for about a minute and a half?

'Tis not so hard to keep it up. As you perhaps might fear. A little practice and your frown will straightway disappear. And in place of it a wreath of playful smiles is found. That's where you'll fool the snapshot man. Should he be snooping round.

So do not wait till you are dragged into the picture place. And sit before the camera. To soften down your face. Look pleasant when you're feeling fine. And when the smiles are blue. And then perhaps a pretty girl will make sheep's eyes at you.

Not For Childish Ears.

"Children, go out of the room immediately and close the door."
"What for?"
"Your father has just lost his collar button under the bureau."

The Call to Action.

Beyond the meadows hay. The lakes lie soft between. On this side nods the daisy. And bravely waves the green.

A bird is softly chanting. And through the evening shade The sunbeams now are slanting. The day's long debt is paid.

Ah, dear is the lake's soft sounding. And in the soft love. But the world's loud clangor's pounding. Around, about, above.

And I loose the arms' soft clasping. And I kiss the lips that cling. Unhush me from their hushing. And into the turmoil swing.

Eye Tonic.

"She admits that she was blinded by love and for a time thought he was her ideal of a man."

"What opened her eyes?"
"A report from Bradstreet's that her very considerable big brother brought home."

Existence of Telurium Ore Has Handicapped Operations But New Process Will be Installed By Directors.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Ogle Mountain Mining Company was held Monday afternoon in Knapp's Hall. Reports from the company's officers were received and much satisfaction was shown by the old stockholders who voluntarily pledged $1800 additional in cash subscriptions. The company will run another tunnel, probably 1000 feet in length under the mountain and will proceed with its development work. A great deal of rich ore has been encountered, but the existence of telurium ore has handicapped operations as the stamp mill will not save this kind of ore.

During the early stage of operations the ore was exposed to the elements and became oxidized, and several thousand dollars were mined, but the fresh telurium ore could not be successfully handled by the stamp mill process. The company therefore plans to develop the property further by running a lower tunnel and tapping the main body of ore, obtaining a different process to save it. The following directors were elected: J. B. Fairclough, T. B. Fairclough, J. V. Harless, S. S. Walker, John Scott. The directors' meeting was held Monday night in the law office of O. D. Ely, and the following officers were chosen: J. B. Fairclough, president and general manager; J. V. Harless, vice-president; W. J. Wilson, secretary; J. M. Eckert, treasurer.

SOCIETY

The Halloween dancing party in the Armory Friday night was an unqualified success, and the members of the Willamette Club are to be congratulated on their carefully laid plans. The decorations were artistic throughout and were much admired. Beautiful autumn leaves were in profusion, and were relieved with green boughs, while jack-o'-lanterns grined from recesses. The punch booth was an attraction. Eighteen numbers were danced to the music of Parsons' orchestra, from Portland. The attendance was large. The Willamette Club will probably give the second dance of its series during Thanksgiving week, when the college students are home for the holidays.

One of the most novel Halloween parties ever given in this city was on Saturday night, when Dr. and Mrs. Leonard L. Pickens, at their attractive home on the West Side, gave a party in honor of their daughter, Marion. The house was appropriately decorated with festoons of miniature bats, and jack-o'-lanterns. The grand march was led by Louise Huntley and Alice Moore, with Miss Martha Frances Draper at the piano. Each guest was dressed to represent some character, making it a very attractive sight. The guests were led into the dining room, which was darkened with subdued lights, where Miss Louise Huntley told a witch's story. Following this the evening was spent in halloween games, and refreshments served. In the cake was a trinket, captured by Anna Lou Sleight, ring, by Ambrose Brownell, and the coin by Alice Moore.

The Rebeekahs gave a Halloween party on Saturday evening, which was a very enjoyable affair. The feature of the evening was whist, in which Miss Velma Shaver was awarded the ladies' first prize, and Miss Ivah Harrington, the ladies' consolation prize; S. S. Walker, the gentlemen's first prize, and the consolation prize was awarded to W. H. Howell. Halloween refreshments, consisting of cider, doughnuts, ginger cake and coffee, were served. Those in charge of the affair were Mrs. Belle Sleight, Mrs. Harry Shaw, Mrs. G. W. Church, Mrs. F. A. Miles, J. J. Cooke, L. Feaster.
