The Humble Railroad Tie.
That the humble railroad tie is a most important factor in the material development of the country is a great truth that is little understood by people outside of railroad circles. The puffing engine that speeds at the rate of a mile or more a minute over the country is a slave to the two steel rails that insure a smooth and safe road, and these rails in turn depend on the old fashioned wooden cross-tie which holds them in place.

Yankee invention has not yet found a substitute which has induced the railroads to give up wood, although experts say that the day will surely come when our country's forests will be no longer called upon to supply the demand for ties. Up to the present time it seems that no other material has been found which has the resiliency of wood and which at the same time causes less year and tear on the rails, fastenings, and road bed.

The country's railroads during the last two or three years used 110,000, 000 to 150,000,000 of sawed and hewn ties a year. The ideal tie is white oak, which combines the qualities of durability, hardness, strength, and close grain. It is not only excellent for ties, but is widely used in ship building, for general construction, in cooperation, in the manufacture of carriages, for agricultural implements, interior finish of houses, and for furniture. On account of this wide use, the supply has been greatly reduced and some of the railroads have been forced to pay almost prohibitive prices for ties, or to substitute other and cheaper woods to replace the white oak ties are rapidly disappearing from their lines.

Over forty per cent of the ties recently purchased by the railroads of the country are oak, according to latest statistics of United States Forest Service. Cross-ties of Southern pine formed somewhat less than 25 per cent. Douglas fir ties ranked third, with approximately 10 per cent of the total. Naturally the proportion of these two timbers will increase as the supply of oak dwindles. This is also true of cedar, chestnut, cypress, Western pine, tamarack, hemlock, and other trees which are coming into the market as tie timbers.

Cedar, which is very durable, has been extensively used to take the place of white oak for ties, but it is so soft that it is readily cut by the rails. This necessitates the use of the plates and other protective devices when cedar ties are used. As the supply of cedar is also running short, it is necessary for the railroads to seek further for new tie timber. One of the woods which has all the requisites of a good tie, with the exception of durability, is the beech.

A beech the generally consists largely of sapwood, which partly accounts for its lack of durability, but, on the other hand, allows a thorough and easy preservative treatment. In Germany and France, beech ties have been successfully preserved from decay, and are used very extensively. Beech is found widely distributed throughout the eastern part of the United States, and at present time is comparatively cheap and abundant. If, therefore, the railroads whose lines are located in the regions where beech is abundant can make use of this wood, treated with some suitable preservative, another source of supply of the timber will be opened up.

Stumpage values have been increasing so rapidly during the last few years that many railroads have found it necessary to modify their timber policy, and they yearly apply preservatives to a greater number of ties than to more kinds of wood. Substitute woods naturally vary with different sections of the country, but in most cases they lack the two essential qualities found in white oak, namely, resistance to mechanical wear and to decay. Experience proves that wear can be successfully retarded by the use of tie plates and other mechanical devices, and decay can be postponed by the application of proper preservatives. The new conditions have made it necessary for many railroad companies to meet the problem of preservation by establishing treating plants at central points of distribution along their lines.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure all kidney ills

A. J. Wood, of 250 Cottage St., Salem, Oregon says: "Kidney and bladder trouble became so bad with me about two months ago that I was obliged to do something to ease the suffering. The trouble bothered me most in the morning for two or three hours after I arose. The too frequent action of the kidney secretions was also very annoying and embarrassing. I had known people who had received the best results from Doan's Kidney Pills and I finally procured a box. Before I had used one box I was completely free from every symptom of the trouble. The kidneys were strengthened and my general health became better. I can hardly express in words the good opinion I have of Doan's Kidney Pills."

This is the case with many Oregon City people.

Too many Oregon City citizens are handicapped with a bad back. The unceasing pain causes constant misery making work a burden and stooping or lifting an impossibility. To eliminate the pains you must cure the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently! Can you doubt Oregon City evidence?

W. M. Stone, a well-known resident of Oregon City, Oregon, says: I have been greatly benefited by the use of two boxes of Doan's Kidney pills.
