THE ONLY VICTIMS. An Adventure in the Surf on the West Coast of Africa.

West Africa is known to all navigators for its few harbors and its heavy surf, which at certain seasons rages like a battle, defying the white man who would approach its shores. The author of "The Jungle Folk of Africa," Mr. R. H. Milligan, tells of a successful effort to reach shore at a point where the surf did not seem to be impossible.

One day when the beach seemed much better than usual the captain and the ship's surgeon ventured ashore. The captain afterward narrated the adventure of their landing to a small but enthusiastic audience. He said that after waiting outside the surf half an hour the headman suddenly gave the order, and in a moment they were in the breakers, riding on the top of one of them and speeding toward the shore at the rate of "seventy miles an hour."

The captain was in the bow of the boat, well braced and cushioned. But when the boat struck the beach with the force of a railway collision the doctor was thrown violently over two thwarts into the captain's bosom, whom he clasped about the neck with a steel-like grip.

The next moment another breaker picked the boat up and hurled it upon the beach, throwing both captain and doctor to a perfectly safe distance, where they sprawled upon the sand. The doctor, still hugging the captain's neck and very much frightened, exclaimed:

"Oh, captain, dear captain, is there anybody killed but you and me?"

BRAVE SOLDIERS. Sacrificed Their Lives in an Attempt to Save the Colors.

In days gone by the Zulus were the boldest fighters among all the natives of South Africa. It was not until they had been defeated in several battles that they would live in peace with white people.

In 1873 15,000 of the Zulus attacked and killed a regiment of British soldiers, and a most heroic deed was the attempt made by three British soldiers to save the two flags, or colors, belonging to the regiment.

When it was seen that the Zulus were so many that there was no hope of keeping them at bay the colonel of the British regiment called to a young officer whose name was Lieutenant Melville and said, "You will take charge of the colors, Melville, and try to get away from here."

The lieutenant saluted and took into his hands the two colors of his regiment. Then, with another officer and a soldier, all mounted on horses, he suddenly dashed away with his precious burden.

They were at once seen by the keen-sighted Zulus, however, and after a long chase the three gallant Englishmen, fighting to the last, were killed by the enemy.

Some time afterward one of the flags was found near a rocky stream, where the heroes had fought and died, and it was taken to England and presented to Queen Victoria.

And in memory of the three brave soldiers who had died while defending it the queen placed a wreath of immortelles on the staff which held the flag—London Mail.

LETTER FROM MEXICO.

Mrs. R. D. Wilson, of this city, is in receipt of the following letter from Mrs. E. E. Williams, who in company with her husband and son, Ray, are making their home in Rodriguez, S. L. P. Mexico. The Williams family formerly resided in this city, where Mr. Williams was in the grocery business, and Mrs. Williams was prominent in musical circles. After Mr. and Mrs. Williams left here they went to Forest Grove, making their home at that place for several years. They are well known in this city, and their many friends will be interested in the following letter, which was written on the 15th of March:

It will soon be three months since you saw us in Oregon City, and what changes have taken place since that time. I know you want first of all, to know how we like it. That is the one question I can't answer off hand.

We had a most delightful trip down here—perfect weather all the way and a two days' stay in San Antonio, Tex., but no place, so far, rivals the Oregon scenery. It is different of course, but no more beautiful or satisfying. Should we go to City of Mexico, we could see more tropical vegetation, but we have not done so. Oregon is still first. Everything is different in Mexico in every way. Tampico is quite a nice city, and there are a good many Americans—in nearly all stores is one man who can understand and talk some English, but there are so very many things we are used to that cannot be found there. It is the rule to have warm or hot weather. Most of the days to date have ranged from 70 to 100. The past month it has kept up to 80 and 100 every day. One day the thermometer registered 104 degrees. We thought we would go under. We have had so far, three northern, the wind blowing pretty hard, but as it died down, the sun comes out and is very warm. That is the one principal thing we are waiting to know about—how much heat this portion is subject to.

Now for our ranch. We are nearly ten miles from the railroad, which makes but little difference. Our station is Rodriguez. It is not a town, and only recently been made a post office. Our land is one great jungle. We are to one side, no clearing around but our own. We have had Mexicans clearing ever since we came. It is slow work, as the jungle is a mass of trees—kind of thorny, short growth, all bound together with a strong vine. The leaves come out only on top of the trees, and as it festoons along this jungle is so dense you can see into it only a few feet. Of course there are various kinds of cacti, palms occasionally and bamboo. The Mexicans use a machete to cut with altogether. You wonder how they can keep it up hour after hour, but they don't work fast and they love to stand and look, and they don't come to work until Monday evening and quit Friday evening.

There are many wild animals—tiger, tigerine, mountain lion, wolf, coyote, leopard, deer, wild hog. We have all of them. Mr. Williams and Ray occasionally see a tiger. Ray shot a hog and brought it in. He ran onto a bunch of seven last week. Three came out of the brush fence a short distance from the house. They shot at them but they got away. There are snakes of various kinds. I have seen none so far and don't want to. Tarantulas also, are numerous, but they are not so scary as those of Texas; I have seen but one. Ticks and fleas have feasted on us, but scarcely a fly or other pests. Our victuals sit around in the open and nothing bothers them, but a few gnats.

We have about 20 acres in all and partly cleared. We are here in the dry season and can't plant yet, but they tell us the rains are due and then planting will begin, corn principally. There are certainly delicious bananas grown here; also pineapples. We are very anxious to have something growing. We have half a dozen pine apples started, the tops of some we ate. We have learned that they grow right along so we are saving them now. We are a little disappointed because we were led to believe we could plant at any time, but it seems not until the rains come now as the ground is so dry. I hope it won't be our misfortune to strike a drought, but everything will grow it seems, as soon as soil is worked a little.

We are having all the trials of the inexperienced: Six sows, two mares, two horses. The ticks try to eat them up. Two Jersey cows are giving milk. We had all the butter, cream and milk we could use—one of the cows has a ten months' old calf, he took a notion he wanted milk, so for several milkings we got none. They tried all kinds of fumes to put on him, all to no use—now he is tied, then the cows found some thing that made the milk taste like garlic. We found the plants, had it cut out; were just catching up in the milk when the hot days actually curdled the milk in the cow's udder. We then got caught up again. Ray hung a big bucket of milk on a limb of a tree while he finished feeding, but turned around and found one of the mules with its head in the bucket—drank every drop, so now we are just getting caught up again. Oh it is great, but it is no Oregon. That is the most I can say now, and as is only to be expected, I wish we were there. I had expected to write some time ago, but from noon until night nearly every day it is so hot I can't think, let alone write—my brain has been, is still in a sort of whirl. I don't realize we are here for any length of time. I wish some one would send me some post cards of Oregon City. Some Forest Grove friends have been sending us cards. It helps lots. I would love to see an Oregon City paper once in a while.

MRS. E. E. WILLIAMS.

Alfalfa Can be Raised in Clackamas County.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Allen and daughter, Miss Edith Allen, who reside near New Era, were in Oregon City Wednesday. Mrs. Allen was on her way to Eastern Oregon, where she was summoned by the illness of her mother, Mrs. LaFollett, who lives near Prineville. Mrs. LaFollett recently met with an accident in which her ankle was broken and Mrs. Allen will remain with her until her mother's condition will permit her doing so.

Mr. Allen brought to this city with him a sample of alfalfa that was raised on his place, and which has attained a height already of twenty inches. Last year it reached a height of five feet, and was of excellent quality. Mr. Allen says that alfalfa can be successfully raised in Clackamas county without irrigation, and thinks that this would be proof to show that it can. The alfalfa was planted by Mr. Miller before the Allen family purchased the land several years ago.
