

Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indecent. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to cure a great many women who have found a refuge for modesty in his offer of FREE consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores, and regulates the womanly functions, abolishes pain and builds up and puts the finishing touch of health on every weak woman who gives it a fair trial.

TAFT AND THE TARIFF.

Seated in a great arm chair, humorously termed by members of his family "the supreme bench," President Taft outlined his views on the tariff last Sunday afternoon to a little group of newspaper correspondents. Most of the men who gathered on the South porch of the White House to hear the President's views were well known to him. They had accompanied him on many of his travels. Some had more than once been of his party when he went to inspect the great canal. Some of them had accompanied him throughout the last campaign, studying the political effect of his speeches and reporting to their papers what he said and how it was received. Knowing his callers well, Judge Taft talked with all his accustomed freedom. Knowing well the etiquette of newspaper work in Washington all of the men knew that it would be an unpardonable breach were they to quote the President in print. The "little chat," as the President termed it, lasted for two hours. Such chats are of incalculable value. They make it possible for the views of the Chief Executive to be conveyed to the great clientele represented by these correspondents without the stiffness and formality of an official statement. They enable men familiar with the difficulties and problems which confront the head of the nation to present his views in their own terms and with intelligent application to constantly changing situations. To borrow the favorite term of the correspondents themselves, they serve to "keep them straight" and to diminish the number of unwarranted and sensational reports which find ready circulation in Washington and which the uninformed are prone to accept as gospel truth. Knowing the custom of the President it is possible to distinguish the correspondence of the well informed newspaperman and to accept it with a reliance which otherwise it could not command.

Knowing the frankness with which the President talks to some of his newspaper friends, his views on the tariff, as set forth by the reputable Republican press, are of especial interest. Mr. Taft expected his party in Congress to revise the tariff downward, but he did not expect reductions of an extent which would make possible increased importations. Realizing the tendency to form combinations and create monopolies, he believes it well to take sufficient off of the duties to insure importation in the event that any combination of producers or manufacturers under the guise of the creation of a monopoly to force prices upward beyond a reasonable point. He deems the possibility of importation if prices are forced upward beyond a reasonable point will prove a most salutary check on those who are tempted to form trusts, or what is more dangerous, make "gentlemen's agreements" to maintain prices. There are some instances where his investigations have led him to believe that no tariff whatever is necessary. The case of hides is a notable instance. They were not dutiable before the passage of the Dingley law. Since the passage of that law natural conditions, the diminution of the ranges and the curtailment of the range herds, together, perhaps, with an increased demand for shoes, which are now exported to a large extent, have served to increase the value of hides and he believes that it will promote the cultivation of the foreign trade and prevent exorbitant charges to American consumers without working any material hardship to American producers to place this commodity on the free

CONVENTIONS Canby and Southern Clackamas AT PORTLAND

FARMERS' INSTITUTE WORKERS
14TH ANNUAL MEETING
AUGUST 16 AND 17.

TOUR OF THE VALLEY

Price of Hops is Soaring and Advance Means Money in the Pockets of Growers of the North-west.

PORTLAND, Or., Aug. 5.—(Special) Convention of more than usual interest to the whole Northwest will be held here the middle of August. The American Association of Farmers' Institute Workers will gather here for the 14th annual meeting on August 16 and 17. The Association for the Promotion of Agricultural Science will meet here August 17 and the Association of American Agricultural Colleges will hold the 23rd annual convention here on August 18, 19 and 20.

The conventions will deal with scientific agriculture and improved farming methods will be discussed fully. Able authorities on these subjects will speak. Many will be in attendance from all parts of the United States. The meetings will be held in the convention hall of the Commercial Club. Following the final session on Friday, the visitors will be taken by special train on a trip through the Willamette Valley as guests of the Commercial Club. The hop, prune, walnut and other leading crops of the district will be seen. Corvallis will entertain the delegates over night. On the following day a similar trip will be made to Hood River, where the cranapple orchards will be inspected.

The price of hops is soaring and the advance means money in the pockets of the Northwest growers. A repetition of the striding days of 1904 in the hop trade is promised. Brewers of the world are said to be facing a serious shortage of hops. The market in Portland has been lifted in a few weeks from 10 to 20 cents. Even old hops command good prices. Offers of 13 cents have been made for the 1908 crop, that a few weeks ago went begging for 5 cents. Short crops in England and Germany are reported to be boosting the price.

Oregon lumbermen will participate quite generally in the semi-annual meeting of the Western Pine Manufacturers' Association at Spokane on August 9. The program is an interesting one and many will go from this state. Among the speakers will be Gifford Pinchot, United States Forester. Conservation and reforestation are subjects that will be discussed and are of general interest to lumbermen.

Hops continue to make new records in the Portland market. What is said to have been the highest market price ever paid in any market in the United States was realized here during the past week when $9.50 was paid for a bunch of fine porkers. Many other sales at better than $9 per 100 pounds were made in the local stockyards. These attractive figures ought to encourage farmers to raise more hops. Jacob Kamm, pioneer steamboatman who built the first stern-wheel steamer on the Willamette river, is making plans to put a line of steamers on the Upper Columbia and Snake rivers. He expects to put the steamer Norma in commission above Celilo and the Elidine on the lower end of the route. It is thought large quantities of wheat will be secured on the run up the river to Lewiston.
