FOR THE CHILDREN

The Schoolmaster. Among stirring games that children always enjoy one that is always a success when played with energy is called the "schoolmaster." One of the party, who volunteers to be master, places himself in front of his class, who are all seated in a row. If he chooses he can examine his pupils in the different branches of education in succession or he may choose indiscriminately. Supposing he begins with natural history, he will proceed as follows: Pointing to the pupil at the top of the class, he asks the name of a bird beginning with the letter C. Should the pupil not name a bird beginning with C by the time the master has counted ten it is passed to the next, who, if successful and calls out "crows" or "cuckoo," etc. In time, goes above the one who has failed. Authors, singers, actors or anything else may be chosen if the schoolmaster should think proper as a subject for examination, but whatever may be selected the questions and answers must follow each other with great rapidity or the fun of the game will be lessened.

A Butterfly's "Umbrella"

He was only a butterfly, one of those beautiful, large, bluish black ones that we so often see about the garden, but he was keen enough to get in out of the wet. It was during one of the heavy showers that so frequently in the hot days of summer come suddenly upon us, driving every one to the nearest covert. To escape the downpour, which meant great injury, if not destruction, to so delicate a creature he quickly flew to a nearby Balm of Gilead tree, where, alighting on the underside of a large leaf, he clung with wings closely drawn together and hanging straight downward, using the big leaf as an umbrella to shield him from the great drops falling all round. High and dry, here he remained until the shower had passed and the blue sky and warm sun called him once again to his favorite haunts—St. Nicholas.

Care of Goldfish

When you have goldfish or other lake fish for pets it is a great mistake to suppose that it is necessary to change the water in an aquarium every few days. The tank should be arranged so as seldom, if ever, to require a change of water. This is not difficult to accomplish. Both animals and plants breathe and what is life to the plant is poison to the animal. Animals absorb oxygen and throw off carbonic acid gas. This gas the plants breathe, separating it into carbon and oxygen, absorbing the carbon, which is converted into vegetable tissue, and throwing off the free oxygen for the animals to breathe. By having plants as well as animals in your tank both classes are supplied with breathing material. If you do not overstock the tank either way you need never change the water.—Chicago News.

Conundrums

Why is a cat which catches his tail like a good manager? Because he makes both ends meet. What is that which we often return, but never borrow? Thanks. When is a young lady not a young lady? When she's a sweet tart (sweetheart). Why is a clergyman's horse like a king? Because he is guided by a minister. Why is a miser like one with a short memory? He is always for-getting. Why is a madman like two men? Because he is always beside himself. What is that which a cat has, but no other animal? Kittens. If you saw a dude riding on a donkey, what fruit would it remind you of? A pear.

The Reason. "She is the dearest girl I know. I never saw another." "She finished quite unobtrusively." "With such a dandy brother." —New York Telegram.

Home Course In Modern Agriculture

XVIII.—The Business Side of Farming By C. V. GREGORY, Agricultural Division, Iowa State College Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association

FARMING on high priced land must be conducted on business principles if the greatest profits are to be realized. The farmer's work is by no means done when he has raised a large crop of corn or successfully fattened a carload of steers. He must be able to market his produce at a profit and must also know whether the steers were fed at a profit or a loss and what it costs to produce each crop of grain. It is a fact that the only way to know just what you are doing and just what parts of your farm are bringing in a profit and what ones are being run at a loss is to "keep books."

This does not necessarily mean a complicated system that will require half your time to keep in shape. By a little care the method of keeping accounts can be so systematized as to amount to only a few moments a week.

The first and most important book is the check book. The "check book habit" will often save a great deal of money and trouble. If you lose your check book or have it stolen, you still have your money left. You do not have to waste time trying to make change, since the check can be always made out for exactly the right amount. When you give a man a check in payment for what you owe him, he must sign that check before he can draw the money on it. At the end of every month the bank returns these signed checks to you, and you thus have receipts for all the money you paid out during the month.

For general accounts any good sized blank book will answer. There are a number of specially made farmers' account books, but a blank book which you can rule to suit yourself will be just as good or better. The first page should be devoted to an inventory of the stock, grain and machinery, together with their value. Following this should be a map of the farm.

Next to this should come the cash account. A convenient and simple way of arranging this is as follows:

Table with columns: MONEY RECEIVED, From Whom, Date, For What, Amount, MONEY PAID OUT, To Whom, Date, For What, Amount.

A glance at this page will show which crops are the most profitable ones. In case a certain crop does not show the profit that it should another crop should be substituted for it or different methods of culture adopted.

Similar pages should be arranged for the different classes of live stock. The following will serve as a sample:

Table with columns: HOG ACCOUNT—EXPENSES, Stock Bought, Date, Feed, Milk, Tackage, Other Feeds, Total, HOG ACCOUNT—INCOME, To Whom, Date, Av. Weight, Price, Total.

Once a year these two pages can be balanced, and you can see just where you stand in the hog business. In addition to the expense and income pages for the different classes of stock there should be pages for keeping track of "changing works" at thrashing time, for breeding records, for butter and cream, for poultry and for any other special line in which you are interested. Lining up and arranging the pages will make a good rainy day's job for some of the children, and after that the time required to keep the accounts in shape will be too small to be noticed.

Business methods in marketing are also necessary if the best results are to be obtained. A daily market paper is indispensable in keeping posted on the stock and grain markets and will pay for itself several times over in the course of a year. A telephone is also valuable for obtaining up to the minute market reports on special occasions. In keeping in touch with the local butter, egg and poultry markets the telephone is especially valuable. It is also a time saver in many other ways, so much so that the up to date business farmer cannot afford to be without one.

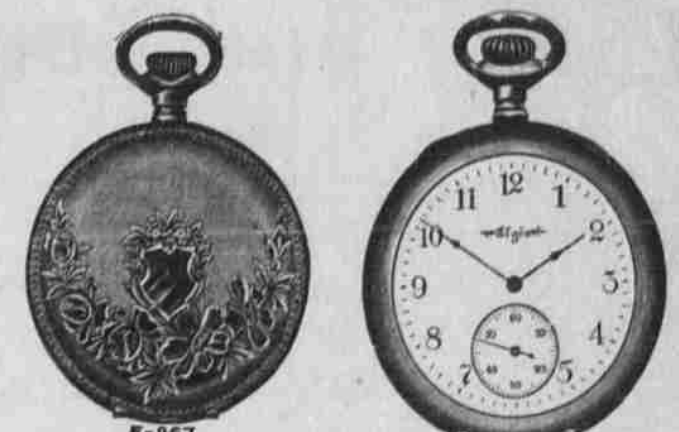

leisure for a new location, but thinks he will decide to make his future home in Los Angeles, Calif., where he now has a son living.

Improvements on Eastham Building. Frost & Kellogg, who were awarded the contract for the completion of the addition to the Eastham school building, have completed their work. The contract price was $750. The Eastham building will house the Oregon City high school this year, and school will open Monday, September 20.

FRANCIS SHANNON DEAD. Hawley Pulp & Paper Company Engineer Victim of Typhoid.

Francis Shannon, a well-known resident of this city, died at his home on Saturday afternoon, after a three weeks' illness of typhoid fever. Mr. Shannon was the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Shannon, of this city. He was born at Beaver Creek, Oregon, October 27, 1878, and was married to Miss Della Guttridge, of Springfield, Oregon, December 27, 1905. Mr. Shannon was connected with the Avonhill Machinery Company, of Portland for two years, and at the time of his death was in the employ of the Hawley Pulp & Paper Company, being chief engineer of the concern. Mr. Shannon was well known throughout the county, and was a man of sterling qualities. He leaves to mourn his loss a wife and three-year-old son; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Shannon; three brothers, William, Henry and James, of Oregon City, and John, of Alaska.

The funeral services were held Thursday under the auspices of the Masonic Lodge and the interment was in Mountain View cemetery.

LABOR DAY NEXT MONDAY. All Banks and Public Buildings Closed for Two Days.

Next Monday, September 6, is Labor Day and is the only real National holiday in the entire year. The banks and all public buildings, including the courthouse, will be closed from Saturday afternoon until Tuesday morning, and for two days all business will be practically at a standstill. Several of the officials of the courthouse and banking institutions are planning for brief outings covering Sunday and Monday.
