There was great sport among the young folks of this city on Sunday afternoon when snowfalling was indulged in. No matter who came along Main Street, they were treated to a shower of snowballs. Even the old indulged in the great sport, and before the close of the war boys, girls, men and women were having a "time of their lives." In the mixup many faces were washed with good humor. Those who did not wish to indulge in snowballing had to sneak up a side street or an alley way to get rid of the assailants. Creamery Manager Here. H. W.
