MONEY QUESTION

In our store has Cash for an answer. Cash is a strong factor in saving money. The family that pays its bills two or three times a year pays interest on the creditor's mortgage, and for the book-keeping necessary for his account. In most stores such a family pays more for the every article, than is paid by the woman who is a cash buyer. We pay cash for our goods, and we pay only for the goods. None of our money helps pay the credit department in a wholesale house. We save money by discounting our bills and you can have some of that discount. We sell to all at one price--one customer's money is as good as another's. It is because of our cash discounts that nearly every item of our goods is a few cents saved for you. A penny is the father of a dollar.
