Compulsory Marriage

The Government of Dalmaria Broke Up Bachelorhood and Spinsterhood

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

The population of Dalmaria had been running down for years. The marriage licenses, which formerly had been issued by the city government at the rate of about a hundred a week, had diminished to ten or a dozen a month.
To remedy the evil the government passed a law that all men should be married by their twenty-first birthday and no girl should refuse an offer unless she could prove the proposer to be a man of bad character or that he was not able to support her.
There was consternation among the unmarried of both sexes at the passage of this law. Single men began to beat themselves to secure—as some of them expressed it—the least undesirable girl in the town. A woman who had received a proposition was given a week to examine into her proposer's fitness and come to a decision. But at the end of the week a new proposer might be accepted. Consequently the girl was not necessarily compelled to marry the first proposer unless no one else entered a claim. This was considered a very wise expedient since it admitted of competition. Nevertheless it resulted in considerable litigation. Girls finding themselves unable to decide between several applicants would defer decision till the limit of time had passed. Sometimes a young man within a few days of his twenty-first birthday would be put off till he had broken the law.
That which has been called the Dumbleton case has come down to us as a cause celebre of this city of compulsory marriages. Irene Dumbleton was what is now called a flirt. It is said that she once met a man at a ball and so twisted his brain that within a couple of days he lay down to an eternal sleep on the bottom of a river. Another within a week after meeting her is reported to have climbed out of the sixth story window of a building and dived to the sidewalk below. Irene Dumbleton could do anything she liked with a man, either reduce him to dough or bake him so hard that she could kill an elephant with him. Nevertheless the instances mentioned were doubtless exaggerated.
When the marriage statute became a law Miss Dumbleton saw that she must marry some man who might propose to her. She did not intend that the wrong proposer should come within the limits of the law. She did not mean to wait for a proposition. She made it her object to draw into her as many proposers as possible in order that she might choose between them.
The morning after the law had gone into effect Miss Dumbleton received a basketful of proposals. Some of the proposers were desirable, some were undesirable and some midway between the two. She wrote all the names of men she considered available on cards and laid them in a row in order of their desirability. The next day brought an accession to the list with a consequent introduction of new names and a rearrangement of the order of value. The second and subsequent days brought still larger accessions, until at the last day of grace three-quarters of the eligible bachelors of her class had proposed to her.
One would think that with so many to choose from Miss Dumbleton might find one—all the law allowed—to fill the position of husband. The truth is that the one she really desired, one whom she had previously declined, had not sent in his name as a candidate for reconsideration.
When Miss Dumbleton discovered that the proposal of Egbert Whitmarsh had not been sent in she was seized with a sudden apprehension. If seven days should pass without his having spoken again she would be obliged to choose between humiliating herself before the man she wanted or going to jail.
Miss Dumbleton lay awake all night thrashing her pillow like one in a fever over this alternative. At one moment she vowed that she would marry one of the men who had proposed to her, thus showing Mr. Whitmarsh that he was not wanted. At the next she decided to break the law and go to jail. Finally it occurred to her that Mr. Whitmarsh was not supposed to know of her change of heart. She concluded to make a virtue of necessity and inform him of that change.
That day—the last but one of those left her to comply with the law—she spent three hours writing letters to "My Dear Mr. Whitmarsh," "My Dear Egbert," "My Dear Friend," "Honored Sir," but she neither came to a decision as to which of these modes of address she would use, nor did any of the letters she wrote please her. Finally she threw them all in the wastebasket, went out in the fog forgetmenots and, putting one of them into an envelope with her card, sent it to Mr. Whitmarsh.
The reply came back to her: "You indicate that you would wish me not to forget you. This is heaping on me a sorrow's crown. If you realized my sufferings on your account you would wish me to forget you as soon as possible."
"Fool!" exclaimed Miss Dumbleton. "What I tell him that I have changed my mind with regard to him? Yes! No! What shall I do? I have but till tomorrow at noon."
She dashed off the words, "I have changed my mind," and, placing the message in the hands of her servant, told him to take it at once to Mr. Whitmarsh.
The reply was, to any the least, annoying: "To me who have loved you from the first moment I laid eyes on you your message is unintelligible. How can one change one's mind so quickly in a matter of love? Love is not an opinion; it is a mingling of souls."

Pupils Win High Honors. The pupils of the eighth grade, who recently took the eighth grade examinations, are deserving of great credit in their high standing. The lowest average in history was 94 per cent., while the highest was 100, and Adelbert Gordon had the honor of having the highest score. There were four in the class who received 99 per cent. The pupils who have passed are Orlando Romig, Louis Mitta, Alta Skoen, Roland Howitt, Adelbert Gordon, Wever Meeks, Ralph Coleman. In the examination held previous to this the following were successful: Lillie Mitta, Rachel Spencer, Wayne Gurley, Golda Hinton, Marie Diggeress, Florence Munsen. There will be two more who will pass in June, and who failed in one of the studies at the recent examination. Prof. T. J. Gill, teacher of the eighth grade, is very proud of the pupils who have been successful, and it speaks well for his teaching for their high standing. This is the largest class in the county that passed.
Petitions Being Circulated. Petitions are being circulated by William Knight, clerk of the district, for the formation of a high school of the districts of New Era, Brown, Union Hill, Mundorf, Lone Elder and Barlow. These petitions are being signed by many of the taxpayers, who are working for the interests of their schools.

THE COST OF DENTAL WORK

The cost of dental work is often given as an excuse for neglect; but have you ever considered the work done by your teeth and the relative cost of dentistry compared to food, clothing, etc.? The teeth are our best friends, never valued until lost. If you neglect them you cheat yourself. There is no work that costs so little in proportion to its imperative essentiality as good dental work. There is none that can compare with it in effect upon good looks and good health. A better appreciation of conditions has made the public better understand the beneficent services rendered by dentistry in the preventative and protective work that it has done.
