Fellow Republicans.

In announcing my candidacy for sheriff, many know that I am a pioneer born in this county, and taught school in Oregon for many years.

The business of the office has grown to such dimensions that it requires a man of some experience and ability to handle half a million dollars yearly—the sheriff now collects. If I did not feel competent to do the work, I should not offer my services.

If nominated and elected, I promise to do it carefully and as economically as possible, consistent with good accurate work.

This handling of half a million dollars in sums of three cents up is a task that requires careful painstaking work—a work of great importance to the people of this county—and a work that should be done by a man that knows how. I feel that I know how, and, if elected, will give the people the best service possible.
