POTATO CROP GOOD. Quality of Potatoes is Much Better Than Last Year.

The late crop of Oregon potatoes turned out to be larger than expected and far better in quality than the dealers thought possible. The grade as a whole, is even superior to that of last year.

The 1910 potato crop of the United States, according to the final estimate of the New England Homestead, is placed at 285,058,000 bushels, or considerable short of a bumper yield. The area planted was 3,129,000 acres, or slightly less than a year ago. The rate of yield of the country averages about 91 bushels.

The only business passing in the local hop market is between dealers. Growers are firm and turn down of fers, so what demand there is is be ng supplied by local speculators Some of these dealers are showing pressure to unload, and it is this that is responsible for the easy appearance of the market. The sales reported yesterday were at prices ranging from 1014 to about 13 cents.

There is a very steady demand for cattle and prices may be said to have strengthened throughout the week. The demand for cows was exceedingly strong and the supply did not meet the requirements of the demand. The hog market is marked by increased arrivals from local territory, and the market was a dime higher at the week's close than at the opening. There is not enough sheep to meet the requirements of the trade and a strong tone prevailed throughout.

Vegetables of many varieties are found on the local markets. The celery never looked better than that be ing brought in by the growers and the price for this is good. There is

There is a good demand for cab-bage and the local merchants have been able to supply the big demand for those using same for kraut, Beets, onions, parsnips, cauliflower and turnips are among the vegetables that are finding a good demand.
