GOOD ROADS ACTIVITY. From the reports of the activity among the people of Oregon who believe in the development benefits to be derived from the construction of good roads it seems that after many years of talking a practical effort is about to bear practical results. No one has ever questioned the necessity for good roads. The development of every community where transportation has been made easy by means of solid roadways bespeaks their value as an investment. Oregon has now the opportunity to avoid the mistakes made in other states. The establish The five good roads bills now before where it can be had for going after it. 3. #### WHY SHOULD THEY.

It is proposed to tax the farmers and producers of Oregon $100,000 a year to patrol the forests of the state to keep them from burning. These forests are mostly in the hands of a trust and some blg interests. They are said to be worth eight hundred millions of dollars. They are capable of paying for their own protection, and a special tax should be levied upon them to patrol them. Suppose they were assessed for four hundred millions and a special tax of one quar-
