Requests and communications was called into extra session. There seems to be too much reorganizing made necessary, and that the Democrats, who have recently come into power, hardly know which end to take hold of.

Why should there be all this preparation? Why is not the business of the country so conducted that it will matter not which party is in power as regards business? That is the way the business should be conducted, and no mistake. What is there to business rightly conducted so that the change from one party to the other makes so much commotion?

There is no doubt that the Democrats are weeding out certain fat jobs that should have been abolished years ago, but that ought not delay business to any great extent and the change from one party to the other should be
