Doubtiess any one permitted to examine the records of a chancery court to those who cannot be found or, if found, only after years of search. Sometimes the beirs have died before be heard from. The reason that property often passes through this phase is that the members of families as the years go by become separated and often lost to each other. When persons who have no one near and dear to them make wills, preferring that their property shall go to their own kindred, they usually leave their estates to such, possibly not having beard anything of the legatee for

Zachary Thompson when he was a boy ran away and went to sen. Fifty years ago and more that was a favorite escapade with boys. They don't do it so much now, for steam has taken the romance out of the life before the mast. Indeed, instead of a mast the modern vessel has a smokestack. Zachary, havng read sea stories, became infatuated with the great deep and shipped as cabin boy on a barkentine trading between New York and Hongkong.

being reproved by the captain, sworn at by the mate and flogged by the cook. Even the scullion tyraunized over little Zachary, and, baving made one voyage, the boy remained ashore. though he was too proud to go bome. Indeed, he got as far away as possible from his home and went to work in a store, his principal duties being to sweep out early in the morning. make the fires, clean up generally and run errands the rest of the day.

Thompson spent twenty years trything about him that was successful was keeping up his pride.

When he was thirty years old be married a girl who should have had better sense. She, too, had never had any luck, and now there were two unlucky mortals who proceeded to bring February 2, 1912 into the world unlucky children. MARK O'NEILL and Thompson in order to fill the stomachs | JOS. E. HEDGES, Oregon City, Ore. of his wife and children, though be had been born a gentleman, took up any occupation that appeared, at last accepting a position with an undertaker. This led him into that department of the mortuary business which pertains to carrying the dead to their last resting place.

He was taking his bearse to cover after a funeral one evening when he ran into a light buggy driven by a gentleman who, being nearsighted and darkness having come on, did not see ed the vehicle.

"You should paint your funeral wagon red or some other color if you're for my buggy."

"I don't believe there is any law to compel me to do that," said Thomp-

"There isn't, eb? Well I think ought to know since I'm a lawyer." "Just my luck!" monned Thompson. "If any one else had run down n wagon he wouldn't have happened to

By this time a small crowd collected. and a policeman was among the num-"What's up?" he asked.

"This driver of black wagons for dead men on dark nights has run into me and smashed a $300 buggy.

"Shall I take him in?" asked the cop "Not if he will give his name." Thompson was discouraged. He gave up his name without a murmur: "Zachary Taylor Thompson."

The gentleman looked up from the memorandum book on which he was about to write the name "Zachary Taylor Thompson?" he asked. "Yes." "How did you happen to be named Zachary Taylor?"

"Born when General Taylor licked the Mexicans and named for him." "Who was your father?"

"Edward Prentiss Thompson." "Did you have any brothers?" "Yes-one."

"His name?" "Winfield Scott Thompson."

"And you consider yourself an un lucky man?" "Never had any luck so far."

"Well, you've got it now. Ten years ago your brother, Winfield Scott Thompson, died and left you an estate worth $200,000, and the executors of the will are clients of mine.
