

A CONDUCTOR'S STORY

By BISSELL T. RAND

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

We railroad conductors have to stand a great deal of abuse, to which we are expected to give a courteous reply. I make it a rule when a passenger takes me to task for something that occurs in the line of my duty not to stop for a talk, but to push on to another part of the train. In this way I avoid an unpleasant discussion, probably having to listen to a catalogue of the railroad management's sins against the public and being tortured into breaking the rules by using severe words.

The most disagreeable duty of a conductor is putting persons off of the train who either cannot or will not pay their fare. We must be careful to keep within the law, and we can't always be certain about it. The company don't wish to be sued for damages in such cases, and where they are it prefers that the law be on their side.

I was going through my train one day when a seedy looking man handed me a ticket on another road. I refused to take it, of course. Whereupon he said that it had been sold to him for a ticket on my road and I had got to take it. I insisted that if he didn't pay his fare I would put him off. Whereupon he paid to a station called Arlington, saying that was all I would get for the whole distance. I replied that he could ride to Arlington, and if he didn't pay further he would be put off at Harterville two miles beyond Arlington.

The man was evidently playing some game. I disliked interfering with him for fear he was intending to get put off that he might serve some purpose by doing so. The fellow looked too respectable for his clothes. However, the rules were imperative, and when he refused to pay at Arlington I determined to put him off at Harterville. When the train stopped I put my arms under his armpits and lifted him out of his seat and hustled him to the door of the car. I got him through, but when I endeavored to dislodge him from the platform he put up an effective resistance. Getting his grip on the guard rail, he hung on till a crowd, attracted by the noise, collected, and my man, though struggling, found breath to curse the railroad, its management and all its employees. Finally I pushed him ahead and signaled the engineer to pull ahead. I left the man shaking his fist at me and vowing vengeance. Looking back from a distance, I saw him haranguing those who had witnessed his ejection.

The matter troubled me. I expected that he had some right to ride that I knew not of—that he would sue the company and I would be discharged for not having passed him. Ordinarily, this would not have troubled me, but in this case the man, though shabbily dressed, did not look like a tramp or a man accustomed to force himself as a deadhead.

There had been an attempt to wreck one of the trains on the road which had nearly succeeded. The train referred to carried a large sum of money for an express company, and it was supposed that it was to rob this car that the attempt had been made. Running a local train myself, I did not take much interest in the matter, for my train was not liable to be wrecked for purposes of robbery.

One morning I was told that the gang who had attempted to wreck the train had been tracked by detectives employed by the company, and an arrest had been made. But where they had been captured I did not hear. I was just starting out on my daily trip and had no time to indulge my curiosity by making inquiries about the matter.

When I reached Arlington I was handed a telegram from the superintendent to stop my train just across a bridge a mile before I reached Harterville and take on a party that would be waiting there for me. I made the stop as ordered and found several plain clothes police officers, armed with rifles as well as revolvers, guarding a number of handcuffed prisoners. The officers put their captives aboard the train, and after starting I went into the car where they were to collect their fares. One of the officers, clapping a hand on my shoulder, said:

"See here, conductor, a few weeks ago you put me off this train for not paying my fare. I was obliged to carry this man, but now I propose to carry this whole gang through without tickets or money. We're quite prepared for anything that may happen."

The man spoke bluntly, I looked at his face and it seemed familiar. Then it dawned upon me that he was the seedy passenger with whom I had had the scuffle.

In Harterville, cursing you and the road, until one of these men was emboldened to propose to me another attempt at wrecking.

He had had a pass in his pocket at the time I put him off, and had another now for himself and party. But I didn't ask to see it.

The Philippine Islands, named after King Philip of Spain—were discovered in March, 1521, by the famous explorer Magellan. It was during a fight with the natives of the island that Magellan lost his life. The islands were taken possession of in 1565 by a fleet from Mexico. In 1570 a settlement was effected at the mouth of the Manilla river, and Manila became the Spanish capital. The population of the Philippines is between eight and ten millions, mostly natives, a mixture of Malays, Chinese, Japs, negroes and various other races. The latent wealth of the islands is immense, and great developments are looked for in the future.—New York American.

Chinese Names. "We may all be pardoned for giving up the puzzle of Chinese names," says a writer, "and yet this little vocabulary may help the newspaper reader through the dispatches that come from China. King means metropolitan; Fu, provincial capital; Chu, a second class city; Kien, a third class city; Kiang, a river; Ho, a stream; Hai, a lake or sea; Tao, island; Chan, a mountain; Ling, a pass; Ta, big; Siao, little; Kouan, fortress; Wei, camp; Men, carrier; Pei, north; Nan, south; Si, west; Chang, up; Pa, white; Hsi, black; Yang, blue. Nanking therefore, as has been noted already, is southern metropolis; Peking northern metropolis."—Chicago News.

LIVE STOCK MARKET AFFECTED BY HOLIDAY

The Portland Union Stock Yards Company reports as follows: Receipts for the week have been 867 cattle, 29 calves, 2,667 hogs, 3,044 sheep, 40 horses.

The holiday tendency for buyers to hold off and give themselves a chance to do better, the cooler stocks had the effect of making the market for the week somewhat slow. The light supplies were just about up to the requirements and the most noted happening of the week was the sales of a Christmas steer at ten cents which weighed 2,100 pounds, and dressed 72.4 per cent. This is a phenomenal dress for a two-year-old and under three steers. The cow market showed an increase, and on the whole prices may be said to be stronger and higher at the week's close.

The hog market showed further weakness, tops being $6.40. The arrival of contracted deliveries had a damaging effect on the price of local hogs, a condition which is due to the failure of shippers to notify commission men of their anticipated movement of live stock. Had the market been known of the hogs that were coming forward to market they might have prevented the placing of contract for Eastern purchases.

Lambs sold at $4.85 and $5.00. The sale of 12,153 pounds that had been properly fattened, at $5.65, is an evidence of the contention that good mutton will always bring a good price.

Table with 2 columns: Item and Price. Includes 1 Steer $10.00, 74 Steers $5.75, 28 Steers $5.40, 40 Steers $5.25, 11 Cows $4.05, 52 Cows $4.80, 37 Cows $4.75, 2 Calves $7.50, 3 Bulls $4.00, 2 Bulls $3.50, 2 Bulls $4.75, 497 Hogs $6.40, 659 Hogs $6.25, 153 Hogs $5.75, 43 Hogs $5.00, 287 Lambs $3.50, 440 Lambs $4.85, 201 Wethers $1.40, 187 Ewes $3.50.
