

NOT GUILTY, PLEA OF IRON WORKERS

COURT OVERRULES MOTION OF DEFENDANTS TO QUASH INDICTMENTS

MEN MAY ASK FOR SEPARATE TRIALS

Consolidation of Cases Urged By District Attorney—True Bills Are Attacked By Lawyers

INDIANAPOLIS, March 12.—"Not guilty," was the plea of 46 men arranged this afternoon in Federal court here on indictments charging complicity in the alleged conspiracy unlawfully to transport dynamite from state to state.

Consolidation of the cases asked by United States District Attorney Miller was ordered, subject to petition tomorrow for separate trials if the defense so desires.

When Judge Anderson announced he would overrule the demurrers to the 34 indictments, he turned to the defendants, for whom seats had been arranged in tiers, and said:

"Gentlemen do you know the nature of the charges against you?" "We do," came in a heavy chorus. Then, one by one the indicted men present or ex-labor union officials from many sections of the country, and headed by Frank M. Ryan, president of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, arose as their names were called by the clerk and responded:

"Not Guilty." Attacks from many angles were made on the indictments, which charge the defendants with aiding and abetting Orrie E. McManigal and John and James M. McNamara in the transportation of dynamite on passenger trains, with being principals with McManigal and the McNamaras in the illegal acts, and with having conspired to violate the statutes prohibiting such transportation.

Attorney Alfred Hovey then attacked the indictments, denying there was a showing that the defendants had unlawfully conveyed explosives on passenger trains. He declared there was no violation of Federal statutes, unless explosives were transported on common carriers concealed in unmarked packages, and maintained the indictments did not so aver.

GERMAN COLLIERIES AND POLICE FIGHT

BERLIN, March 12.—Five policemen and many strikers were injured today in a riot near Hamburg, district of Dusseldorf, in which 2000 striking coal miners attacked the forty officers on guard with revolvers and stones. The police charged with drawn sabers.

Collisions between strikers and police and non-strikers occurred today in six or eight localities in the coal regions. At several places workers were stoned and the police used their sabers in dispersing the strikers.

The Christians trades unions and the miners telegraphed to the Minister of the Interior to send troops or to reinforce the police in the coal districts. The police authorities assent the police protection is sufficient.

The strike is making considerable progress in all directions. Many of the mines worked today with only one of the three shifts ordinarily employed.

Arrangements have been made for the miners willing to work to enter and leave the pits by daylight, so as to prevent disorders.

A small union of the holsters joined the strike today.

The owners have invited committees representing the miners from the individual mines to meet in conference tomorrow.

CARRIERS APPEAL FOR BETTER ROADS

The rural letter carriers of Clackamas and Marion counties met in the City hall at Canby last Sunday. In the absence of the president of the County Association the meeting was called to order by the State President Franz Kraxberger, of Aurora.

Postmaster A. Knight was present and gave the carriers a hearty welcome in behalf of the citizens of Canby. Mr. Knight also delivered an address on the association's work. Speeches were made by the carriers on good roads and other matters pertaining to the rural free delivery service.

A fine chicken dinner was served to the members at the Cottage hotel. The following were appointed by the president to draft resolutions: William T. Smith, of Oregon City; Otis Liman, Oregon City; H. H. Barnard, Oregon City; John R. Townsley, Milwaukie; Mr. Ebert, Molalla; Marlon Lee, Canby; James Wilkerson, Canby. The following resolutions were adopted:

"Resolved, that we favor the election of all road supervisors by the popular vote of the people at a given date at the end of the year to be designated as 'Road Day,' at which time all road taxes could be levied, also resolutions favoring the use of the split log drag on all dirt roads.

"Resolved, that we favor a law being enacted by our state legislature preventing extreme heavy hauling over our county roads during the winter season."

Five applicants for membership were received and a vote of thanks was voted the people, the postmasters and carriers of Canby for the hospitality shown the carriers. The next meeting of the association will be held at Aurora in April or May.

The secretary of the meeting was Charles A. Andrus, of Oregon City.

Heart to Heart Talks.

YOUR BOY. This is a serious talk to parents concerning the boy—the common, everyday garden variety of boy.

He is bigger than factory or farm or business because he has in him the making of a man, and a man is the biggest thing in the universe.

Shall the boy be a man or a thing? There is a lot of good in the average boy. He is inclined to be trustful and he has a keen sense of justice.

Good material out of which to manufacture manliness. But— If you would get the best out of him believe in him, not make believe, or he will find you out.

If you believe in him he will believe in you—which is your starting point. And if you really believe in him you will not scold him nor find fault. That sort of treatment brings the bad, not the good, out of him.

To get at the heart of him foster his natural desire to do his best by encouragement. Because— He will grow into the likeness of that which he desires to do or be. Stimulate his desire to be or do, and he will come to his fruition naturally, as a flower grows. Even flowers must be encouraged.

Cheer him on. If he tends to some bad habit change his surroundings. Association has everything to do in the making or unmaking of a boy. Get him into the right sort of company, change his activities, and the bad habits will disappear by disuse.

Do not do too much for him. Be careful along this line. If you do too much he will do nothing for himself. Which is fatal. He must learn to do things by doing them—by experience.

Be very firm, but very kind. Remember that he is in the making. Treat him fairly, but justly—remember, very justly.

As he grows older appeal to his pride to get on in the world. Get his confidence and hold on to it. Give impulse to his ambition. Keep him in the straight path.

Common sort of advice? Yes, common, but many a parent is trying to force his boy or to neglect him and then scold him into manliness. It cannot be done.

DISCOVERING POLE EASY—AMUNDSEN

MEN AND DOGS STAND TRIP WELL AND WEATHER DOES NOT DISTRESS

OBSERVATIONS ARE TAKEN IN SUN

Most Southern Part of Earth Is Found To Be An Immense Plateau of Ice And Snow

HOBART, Tasmania, March 8.—Roald A. Amundsen, in a letter today, describes the discovery of the south pole by himself and party. He declares the task was much easier than had been expected, and that not a member of his party suffered from the cold.

The daring explorer says the temperature was only 9.4 degrees below zero Fahrenheit.

"December 14," he writes "was a beautiful one. There was a light breeze from the southeast. The ground and sledging were perfect. The day went along as usual and we made a halt."

"According to our reckoning we had reached our destination. All of us gathered around the colors, a beautiful silk flag—all hands taking hold of it and planting it. The vast plateau on which the pole is standing got the name of the 'King Haakon VII Plateau.' It is a vast plain alike in all directions; mile after mile during the night we circled around the camp."

"In the weather we spent the following day taking a series of observations from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m. The result gave us 89 degrees, 55 minutes."

"In order to observe the pole as closely as possible we traveled, as near south as possible, the remaining nine kilometers."

"On December 16 there we camped. It was an excellent opportunity. There was a brilliant sun. Four of us took observations every hour of the day—24 hours. The exact result will be the matter of a professional private report."

"This much is certain—that we observed the Pole as closely as it is in human power to do it with the instruments we had—a sextant and an artificial horizon."

"On December 17 everything was in order on the spot. We fastened to the ground a little tent we had brought along, a Norwegian flag and the Fram pendant, 'to the top of it.'"

"The Norwegian home at the South Pole was called 'Polheim.' The distance from our winter quarters to the Pole was about 1400 kilometers. The average march a day was 25 kilometers."

"We started on the return trip on the 17th of December. Unusually favorable weather made our way home considerably easier than the journey to the Pole. We arrived at our winter quarters, 'Framheim,' on the 23th of January, 1912, with two sledges and 11 dogs all well."

Why He Doubted the Map.

At a St. Andrew's society dinner one of the speakers told of a Scotch gardener, recently landed, who had great difficulty in acquiring a knowledge of American geography. The son of the household, failing to teach the gardener in any other way, brought out a huge, highly colored map. The Scot looked at it critically.

"The Norwegian home at the South Pole was called 'Polheim.' The distance from our winter quarters to the Pole was about 1400 kilometers. The average march a day was 25 kilometers."

Etiquette.

Frederick Townsend Martin at a dinner in New York criticized American manners.

"Kipling," he said, "declares that a gentleman has manner, while a would be gentleman has manners. We should remember that. We lay too much stress on such details as taking off our hats when we go up in the elevator with a scrubwoman."

"In fact, in everything we seem to search too uneasily for the correct, the modish course. A society editor told me the other day that he had just got a letter from a young woman that ran: 'Dear Editor—Please state who should keep up the installations on the ring when the engagement is broken off.'"

DOUBLY PROVEN.

Oregon City Readers Can No Longer Doubt the Evidence. This Oregon City citizen testified long ago.

Told of quick relief—of lasting benefit. The facts are now confirmed. Such testimony is complete—the evidence conclusive.

It forms convincing proof of merit. Theodore Huertch, Park Place, Oregon City, Ore., says: "I found Doan's Kidney Pills to be just as represented and I consider them worthy of recommendation. For a long time I suffered from lameness across my back and there was a steady ache over my kidneys. The trouble was not severe enough to lay me up but it caused great distress, especially when I sloped or lifted. On a friend's advice, I was finally led to use Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from the Huntley Bros' Drug Co. and they removed every symptom of my trouble."

Was It Genius?

By JOHN C. WINSLOW Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Paul Crook was a young American art student in Paris. He was considered very promising by connoisseurs, and a number of his chums looked upon him as a coming genius.

Crook lived just such a life as other artists lived in the Latin quarter at that time, which was a bohemian one, mingling only with those who were either artists, artists' models or grisettes.

He had a bed in his studio, where he slept and got his own breakfast, dining usually at a restaurant, where he met other artists and the women they associated with, including models. They would usually get together at the same table, and a merrier lot were not to be found in all Paris.

There was a girl who belonged to this set who seemed out of place. There was a refined purity about her that none of the others possessed. She made her living as an artist's model, but especially for her head and shoulders. She had posed for more Madonnas pictures than would fill one of the rooms in the Louvre.

Crook, being the most prominent artist of the set, considered that any one of the girls he chose to smile upon should smile upon him in return. He took a fancy to Cecile Boyer—"the Madonna," as she was familiarly referred to—and was very much put out that she did not return his admiration.

The truth is Cecile had given her heart to David Forbes, one of the least prominent of the young artists studying in Paris. He, too, was an American. Why he tried to make an artist of himself no one could conjecture, for he had no idea of any of those matters which pertain to art.

He undertook to paint a scene as revealed through a window and devoted two-thirds of his space to the curtain. As to perspective, he would paint a house and a pump, showing the pump larger than the house. When his chums ridiculed his work Cecile defended him. Indeed, the only cause they could assign for her affection for him was pity. Crook could paint excellent pictures, but Cecile did not love him. Forbes couldn't paint anything of value, and he was hers heart and soul.

Of all the young women who met at the B. cafe Cecile was the only one who never posed except completely dressed. Indeed, since she was wanted specially for her head and shoulders, nudity was unnecessary. The singular feature of her association with the others was that she did not in any way assume to be better than they.

Unfortunately for Forbes, he could not afford to spend his time trying to earn what seemed impossible for him to learn, for he was poor. But the less money he had in his pocket the more determined he became to make an artist of himself. Whether Cecile encouraged him in his purpose no one knew, though all understood she struck by him. About the time his last franc was spent and no remittance to come from America his health broke down, and that finished his work for him, at least for the present.

His artist friends went to see him and asked if they could do anything for him, but he shook his head and said that he was getting on very well. Sometimes they would find Cecile there, ministering to him. Indeed, she was providing for him, but at that time no one dreamed of such a thing.

During Forbes' illness Paul Crook attempted to gain some foothold with Cecile. She neither encouraged nor repelled him. Indeed, she continued to be indifferent to him. He offered her a large sum to pose to him for a picture requiring a model for the whole figure. For a time he believed she would consent. She wanted the money for David Forbes. She went to David, told him of the offer and said that if he would accept of the sacrifice she would accept Crook's proposition.

By this she gave him a dose that look away his malady and called out an artistic ability that no one knew was in him. He spurned the proposition with horror, saying: "Had I such a model I could produce a wonder."

That was the origin of Forbes' picture of Eve, which was hung in the Paris salon the next year. None of the set of which Paul Crook was the thing light recognized Cecile as the model for Eve. Forbes put just enough change in the features to prevent her being recognized. He shrank from her appearing before the world as his model more than she. She was shielded by his love and her sacrifice.

What a singular behaviorment! Crook was expected to give the world its least one great work. So he did. But how? By stirring the poison of jealousy in a man who it was believed had not a single artistic instinct, Crook called out an latent, unexpected ability Crook himself seldom rose above mediocrity and after awhile seemed to recede from his best work. Indeed, between the two men there was produced but one celebrated picture, that painted by David Forbes.

Forbes' single chef d'oeuvre is a puzzle. If it was really genius, why did it not repeat itself? If it was simply the result of a stimulus, how could it produce a work of genius where genius did not exist? The problem borders on those natural laws which are still hidden from us.

England's First Snuff.

Snuff taking was practically unknown in England until 1702. In that year Sir George Rooke burnt the French and Spanish shipping anchored in the port of Vigo and sacked the town. Besides large quantities of bullion and jewels, his booty included fifty tons of the finest snuff, which was brought to England and thrown on the market at a very low price. This novel form of taking tobacco rapidly caught on, and in a few years the snuffbox had to a large extent ousted the pipe. Connoisseurs used to accumulate special blends of snuff as nowadays they hoard choice cigars. When George IV. died the contents of his snuff cellar were sold for $2,000.—London Globe.

The Fly and the Matches.

One would be inclined to say that for a fly to empty a box of matches is a pretty impossible, yet it can be done to accomplish this feat. Catch an ordinary house fly alive and, taking hold of it carefully by the wings, let it touch a match in an unopened box with its legs. It will at once grip the match in its endeavor to walk, and on lifting the fly the insect will in turn lift the match. Pull the match away from the fly, and the same maneuver can be repeated time after time until the box is empty.

NAGLE DEFENDS TAFT'S POLICIES

SECRETARY SAYS PRESIDENT HAS KEPT HIS PLEDGES

INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM HIT

Commerce And Labor Head Asserts Some Of Questions Urged Are Menace To Republic

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 11.—

In a speech lauding President Taft's Administration as a complete fulfillment of all the Republican platform pledges of 1908, and a strict continuation of the policies inaugurated by President Roosevelt, Secretary Nagle, of the Department of Commerce and Labor, made a vigorous attack tonight on the advocates of such governmental changes as the initiative, referendum and recall.

Secretary Nagle declared public men are trying to "confuse the public mind," that they were "busy making promises to which they cannot successfully be held," that the recall of judges "would make trimmers of men," and "deter men of independence and capacity from accepting positions of trust."

"It was conceivable fifty years ago that as a result of our internal strife there might be two republics," he said. "It is conceivable today that if some of the suggestions put forward at this time are to prevail the question may arise whether or not there shall be one republic."

"Against such a contingency it behooves every citizen to set his face in absolute disregard of every other consideration, personal or political."

The efforts of President Taft to carry out the pledges of the party, he said, had brought no aid from his Republican detractors.

MILWAUKIE PLANS FIRE DEPARTMENT

The Milwaukee Council has voted unanimously to submit a vote to the people for the question of issuing bonds to the amount of $5000 the latter part of the month at a special election to be called for the purpose, with which to purchase fire apparatus and establish a fire department. The Auditor will have out the notice next week date of the special election next week. There is also a movement to consolidate the three private water companies of Milwaukee into one company, which will operate the three plants as one by which it is hoped to save cost of operation. At present Milwaukee is divided into three districts. If the bond issue prevails a large number of fire hydrants will be required.
