

Just Cause

For Forbidding a Wedding

By OSCAR COX

Just before the civil war broke out there was a colored man living on a plantation in Tennessee called Courtney St. Leger.

Now, Courtney had had a wife on the Courtney plantation, and from her he had been divorced by the fact only that he had been sold to Colonel St. Leger.

Susan Clarke, whose name had come to her from a former master, had been bought in New Orleans. How many husbands she had had would not have been known on the Harland plantation had it not been that Pete Lefevre, one of her fellow slaves in Tennessee, and his wife Phoebe had been bought at the same time with her and knew of at least two that she had had under different ownerships.

Courtney and Susan concluded to blot out their remembrances of past carnal bliss and trials by taking each other for lawful partners. Miss Harland, as they called their mistress, was a good woman and would like to have stemmed the current of such marriages among her slaves, but the system of slavery was not conducive to acquiescence on the subject, and she was obliged to take the situation as she found it.

If Walsh was with a high class ball team he would make a wonderful record in the matter of victories, but the Sox, with one or two exceptions, have been a rather poor ball team every season. Even in 1906, when the Sox won the pennant, it was far from being a team of stars, and it was Walsh more than any one else who was responsible for his team's victory that year.

When Abe Attell embarked on his career he was handled by Jack McKenna, a boy who could take care of himself. Abe fought Jack Dempsey in Denver and at the end of the twentieth round the referee, a tall, lanky youth, held both hands up, signifying a draw.

"Gentlemen, a slight correction: Mr. Attell wins." "Gentlemen, a slight correction: Mr. Attell wins."

SPICY SPORT CHATS

By TOMMY CLARK.

While it is unnecessary for the authorities to prevent the average boxing bout on the ground of threatened brutality, yet in the case of the proposed encounter between Jack Johnson and Jim Flynn the Nevada officials would be entirely justified in intervening, not because of any danger of brutality, but because it would be a deliberate attempt to obtain money under false pretenses.

But in the case of Johnson and Flynn the Pueblo freeman has no more chance to win than a white mouse would have against a Maltese cat of the female persuasion.

The records of the men, their weight, size, boxing skill, ring generalship and, all pugilistic qualifications, are so unequal that no one would be justified in betting a stage dollar on the chances of the white man.

The whole thing is merely a scheme to get the money of the public through the medium of the reputation of Johnson.

When Bill Donovan, the star pitcher of the Detroit Americans, gave it as his opinion that big Ed Walsh was the best pitcher in the world he stepped on the toes of the New York critics, who naturally think that this honor belongs to Christy Mathewson, and yet Donovan's assertion is well based. There is no pitcher who has worked in as many games every season as Walsh. Though he has had a mediocre team behind him most of the time, he has been in over fifty games nearly every season, while other pitchers seldom go much over the thirty mark. So far as value to a team is concerned, Walsh really is a class by himself. Not only does he frequently pitch three full games in a week, but he is apt to be used to save two or three others that some of the other pitchers have started.

If Walsh was with a high class ball team he would make a wonderful record in the matter of victories, but the Sox, with one or two exceptions, have been a rather poor ball team every season. Even in 1906, when the Sox won the pennant, it was far from being a team of stars, and it was Walsh more than any one else who was responsible for his team's victory that year.

When Abe Attell embarked on his career he was handled by Jack McKenna, a boy who could take care of himself. Abe fought Jack Dempsey in Denver and at the end of the twentieth round the referee, a tall, lanky youth, held both hands up, signifying a draw.

MATT M'GRATH TO COMPETE.

Champion Hammer and Weight Thrower Will Be on Olympic Team.

Now that Matt McGrath, the policeman-athlete of New York, has announced that he will surely accompany the American team to Sweden next June the Yankee aggregation is assured of several points. Until recently he was not certain of being able to go abroad owing to business reasons.

McGrath has a tight hold on the sixteen pound hammer and the fifty-six pound weight titles and appears a sure winner in these events.
