AVIATOR RODGERS PLUNGES TO DEATH

FIRST BIRDMAN TO FLY ACROSS CONTINENT VICTIM OF RECKLESS DIVE

DISTANCE EVIDENTLY MISJUDGED

Neck And Back Are Broken By Fall In Surf—Air Navigator Dies Soon After Accident

LONG BEACH, Cal., April 3.—California P. Rodgers, an aviator of world-wide fame and the first man to cross the American continent in an aeroplane, was almost instantly killed here this afternoon, when his Wright biplane, in which he was soaring over the ocean, crashed into the surf from a height of 200 feet and buried him in the wreck.

His neck was broken and his body crushed by the engine of his machine. He lived only a few minutes.

Rodgers flew a week past had been making daily flights here and had taken many passengers, both men and women, up with him. He started to fly from his usual place and soared over the ocean, crossing the pier, and then turned and dipped close to the roller coaster.

Rodgers then flew further out to sea all the time gradually rising until he had reached a height of about 200 feet. Making a sharp turn, he started full speed for the pier. Then he suddenly dipped his planes and his machine began a frightful descent.

Rodgers was seen by hundreds of persons on the pier to relax his hold on the levers and then, seemingly realizing that he was in danger, he made strenuous efforts to pull the nose of his machine into a level position. Flipping in this he managed to turn his craft farther ashore and an instant later the huge craft crashed into the edge of the surf.

Men and teams were hired, the ground prepared, and sunflower seeds were brought in and planted. The enterprise was discussed in hundreds of homes and given liberal space in the county papers, but Mr. Hobson would not interview. His reply was "wait." When the stalks were knee high that field was good to see. It was a novelty that drew.

Just about that time almost every person in the county received a circular through the mails. It was about the new medical discovery, and the cat was out of the bag at last. Sunflower tea would speedily—

Cure indigestion. Consumption in its first stages. Cancers and tumors if not too far advanced. Neuralgia and rheumatism. Fever rising from biliousness. Clear the system of malaria. Strengthen the weak and make the strong stronger.

For six weeks the sunflower crusade went on. Mr. Hobson did not seem greatly interested. So far as could be ascertained, he was not the man putting out the advertising, nor did he ever say in so many words that sunflower tea would cure a complaint of any kind. It was not known till the sunflowers began to turn their yellow faces to the morning sun and hang their heads in modesty what he proposed to do with the crop. Then individuals began to come to speak for seeds. It was so much seed for 50 cents and no smaller orders taken. Mr. Hobson had 400 orders booked and was still writing down names when a merchant of the town went to a money lender and said:

"See here, Carter, there's a chance to make $1,000 right under our noses, and we are sitting around like bumps on a log."

"What is it?"

"This part of the state has gone crazy about sunflower tea. That man Hobson is raking in the money as fast as he can reach out his arm. It's a quarter a head for sunflowers, but the mob is paying the price and glad to get 'em."

"But Hobson has got the only sunflowers for a hundred miles around."

"All the better for us if we buy him out and corner the supply. Why not raise the price to 50 cents a head?"

"But is the tea any good?" persisted the cautious capitalist.

"Hobson has got more than 100 unsolicited testimonials. Deacon Good-broy says it cured him of fifteen years' Let's buy Hobson out."

Only one thing on the face of this earth made Mr. Hobson willing to listen to an offer. He had trouble with his heart, and sunflower tea would cure it.

During the next three days 100 people came per day to buy and take sunflower heads. Some had driven a distance of twenty miles. The stalks covering three acres had been sold and carried away by this time, when a New York wholesale druggist appeared on the scene—that is, he said he was from the big city, and he certainly smelled of drugs. He wanted the balance of the crop at $2,000.

Then Mr. Hobson did a mean thing. Had his heart been all right he would never have thought of doing such a thing. He sold those seven acres of sunflowers at their stood to the merchant and capitalist for $2,500 and was missing the next day. So was the New York wholesale druggist. In three or four days the news got around, and buyers became scarce.

What were seven acres of sunflowers good for to the buyers?

Well, they got about $100 out of the enterprise and felt themselves lucky. Mr. Hobson was reckoned to have made almost $2,000, and that wasn't bad for a summer's work. The getting stuck wasn't so bad as what followed. Every drinker of the sunflower tea denied that he had made a fool of himself, and he was passed around and heads punched, and to this day nothing will bring on a fight so quick as the mention of the swindle.

The Sunflower Man

One day ten years ago in the month of April a stranger who gave his name as William Hobson appeared in the village of Grafton in a certain middle state and engaged quarters at the inn for several months in advance. This was something never heard of before and created quite a sensation. Then the report went around that Mr. Hobson intended to build and operate a large woolen mill there, and that was sensation No. 2. Then a county constable had his suspicion aroused that the stranger was a fugitive from justice, and that was sensation No. 3. The fourth was not far away.

Mr. Hobson was a man of middle age. He was quiet and kept to himself. With all the pumping they could do the villagers could find out very little about him. The most that could be extracted from him was that he had made an important medical discovery and would furnish particulars later on.

On the 1st of May, after looking around a bit, Mr. Hobson leased ten acres of land of a farmer near the town, and the fourth sensation came when it was known he intended to raise sunflowers. No human being in that county had ever heard of any one growing more than a hundred head, and here were to be thousands and thousands of them! What could he do with them? How did they fit into a medical discovery?

Men and teams were hired, the ground prepared, and sunflower seeds were brought in and planted. The enterprise was discussed in hundreds of homes and given liberal space in the county papers, but Mr. Hobson would not interview. His reply was "wait." When the stalks were knee high that field was good to see. It was a novelty that drew.

REPUBLICANS HELP PASS WOOL BILL

TARIFF MEASURE APPROVED IN HOUSE BY VOTE OF 189 TO 82

ALL AMENDMENTS ARE DEFEATED

Difference in Cost of Production Starts Lively Debate And Serious Charges Are Made By Speakers

WASHINGTON, April 1.—The Democratic wool bill, known as the Underwood bill, passed the House today, 189 yeas, with 30 "progressive" Republicans voting for it. Representative Tucker of Colorado, who opposed it in debate and answered "present" on the roll call, and Representative Francis of Ohio, who voted against it, were the only Democrats who did not line up with the majority.

The 20 Republicans who voted for the bill were: Anderson, Lindbergh, Miller, Nelson, Nye, Stearns, Stevens, Volstead of Minnesota, Hagen, Hubbard of Iowa, Akin of New York, Jackson Murdock, Young of Kansas, La Follette, Warburton of Washington, Lafayette of Oregon, Hanna of North Dakota, Kent of California, and Norris of Nebraska.

Supporters of the bill said it would not cut the government's revenue but would save more than $50,000,000 a year to consumers because of the readjustment of rebates. All attempts by the Republicans to amend the bill to increase the rates were lost. The tariff board came in for criticism in the speechmaking.

Representative Kitchen charged that Senators Smoot and Warren deliberately had imposed on the tariff board to maintain the high duty on wool.

8,000 SUFFERERS FLEE FROM FLOOD

WASHINGTON, April 3.—With four Mississippi towns seriously affected by invading waters caused by the greatest rise recorded in river history, the flood situation today assumed more serious aspects in widespread distress, heavy financial loss and impairment of business facilities.

President Taft directed the war department today to send 300 army tents to citizens of New Madrid, Mo., who have been made homeless by the flood.

The rescue party that left Fulton, Ky., late last night to search for three men said to have been killed while they were inspecting tracks for washouts along the Illinois Central Railroad did not report today. Forty miles south of Fulton their train went through a bridge, according to the report received here.

Two thousand persons driven from the factory district in Hickman, Ky., are being cared for by townspeople at great personal sacrifice.

The levee broke opposite Hickman yesterday at Dorena, Mo. A thousand residents of the community were rescued from the tops of their homes, and taken to Hickman.

Hickman's food supply is dwindling. Trains bearing tons and provisions cannot reach the flooded town because of railway washouts.

From 14 to 20 blocks is the area covered by the flood in the northern section of Memphis. From 700 to 1200 persons have been driven from their homes. The water continues to rise in the Bayou Gavriso, a small levee being cut, which gave way Monday.

A heroic fight of two days and nights was made by laborers to save the Memphis gas plant, but the force of the flood was too great, and the protecting levee gave way last night. Today, Memphis is without gas.

Relation of Parent to Teacher

(By Mrs. Norman Say)

Down through the ages, flowers and foliage have appealed to the hearts of people, as emblems of country, tokens of endearment, as sentiments of love, for instance, the little shamrock leaf will ever wake the Irish heart, the Scottish thistle is dearer to a Scotchman, than any sweet, fragrant blossom would be, the Canadian bow low to the maple leaf, the Californian loves the yellow poppy, and we who live in Oregon ever welcome the sight of the beautiful Oregon grape, which is the floral emblem of the state. In the same manner, but in a still greater degree do we love our country's flag. We have been taught that the red stands for courage, the blue for loyalty and the white for purity. Why are we loyal to our country's flag? Why do we like to see its colors waving in the breeze? Is it not because history has informed us that the fathers of this great nation fought, and endured hardships to maintain the honor of this country, and that the flagpole with its flying colors of the stars and stripes stands sponsor for our freedom. We are taught to be loyal to father and mother, sisters and brothers loyal to our kindred, but too often we are apt to overlook this needed characteristic with regard to the teachers of our children. Now, if we as parents, can but imbibe the feeling of loyalty toward the teachers in our schools, it will be a splendid thing for the boys and girls of this period for it seems to me that the very first relationship which the parent should bear to the teacher is loyalty. If we have a feeling of loyalty in our schools, the teacher will be pleased to have parents visit the school and the teacher should be invited to the homes of the parents, for in this way can he become thoroughly acquainted with the home environment of her pupils. Very often the teacher is enabled to find her way to the hearts of her pupils by visiting them at home and finding out what interests them as individuals out of school hours.

After loyalty and acquaintance should come appreciation, the kind of appreciation that talks out loud. We are apt to be very prompt at times with adverse criticism and to respond slowly with our first appreciation. I remember once sending a note of appreciation to a teacher in the primary grade, when my boys were in her room and I was much surprised to receive the following letter which I have copied word for word.

"Dear Mrs. Say:—Your note this morning left a song in my heart all day as I try to do my best but do not always see the result of my efforts, and sometimes become quite discouraged."

I made up my mind never to allow an opportunity of showing just appreciation to pass by unheeded again.

The most important relationship between the parent and the teacher is cooperation. Organized effort such as is carried on by Parent-Teacher Associations and the International Congress of Mothers, where parents and teachers join hands in bettering conditions and giving greater advantages to the boys and girls, who are growing up around us, has become the chief factor in the uplifting of the home and school. We, as members of a farm-home community are being given more chances than ever before. The slogan, "Back to the Farm," has gone out from headquarters. Domestic science, manual training and agriculture are no longer dreams of the future, and our boys and girls are being taught the dignity of labor. Our state superintendent of schools in Oregon has been very active in bringing the farm to the front, but if he were not receiving assistance of county superintendents, teachers and parents he could not accomplish this purpose alone. Our county superintendent is putting forth every effort to cooperate, and the parents' relationship to the teacher must be that of cooperation, if we are to succeed.

Sometimes we think we have no time to take part in this work, but I am reminded of the kindly concern of an elderly lady of sixty years, who was a regular attendant of our Mothers' Club in the town in which I resided in California, upon some one making the old time remark, "Oh, I have no time for such things," "Oh, my motherly old lady replied, "Oh, if women only realized how much time they will have after a while, when the boys and girls have become men and women, and have passed on to the world, and the corridors of the home no longer ring with shouts of laughter and childish glee," and is it not so, for if we cooperate with the teachers now while opportunity is knocking so loudly at our doors, we will keep pace with other nations, and by so doing honor the land where the flag waves from every school yard, ever declaring that we breath the air of freedom and that this is truly, "The land of the free and the home of the brave."

CAUGHT IN MACHINE, GAY SAVES HIMSELF

R. A. Gay, a well known resident of Gladstone, had a narrow escape from death while working at the Willamette Pulp & Paper Company Saturday and it was due to his strength that he was saved. Mr. Gay was employed in working near a shafting when his foot caught, and he held fast to the belts that were going at a great speed to prevent himself from being carried into the wheels. One of the workmen hearing his cries for help rushed to his rescue and stopped the machinery. Mr. Gay's foot was badly injured, and he is now using a crutch.

FUGITIVE POINTS PISTOLS IN AIR INDICATING DESIRE TO SURRENDER

Capture Of Claude Allen Encourages Posses in Belief That Others Soon Will Be Arrested

HILLSVILLE, Va., March 28.—Starving, sleepless and fatigued, Claude Swanson Allen came out of the laurel thicket in the Blue Ridge to-day, pointed two six-shooters toward the sky and gave himself up to the posse which for nearly two weeks has hunted him.

Compuncted and almost happy, he sat tonight, sheltered from a driving storm in the little brick jail a stone's throw from the Carroll Courthouse, where, March 14, the Allen gang vanquished killed the judge, the prosecutor, the Sheriff, a juror and a bystander.

All day the posses, divided into small numbers, had been following a trail thought to be that of Wesley Edwards, a nephew of the Allens. Suddenly Detective Lucas and four men saw a figure creeping stealthily through the undergrowth.

The posse threw their rifles to their shoulders and Allen stepped out into the road, his hands upraised, a pistol in each.

"I'm glad to get a chance to come in," he said. "I haven't slept in a bed since the shooting. I'm hungry."

The young mountaineer swung in between the men of the posse and they started back to Hillsville.

Claude's capture gives renewed hope that the capture of the three remaining fugitives—Sidna Allen, his nephew Friel and Wesley Edwards.

Claude stoutly denied any knowledge of the hiding place of the three.

DEMOCRATS FIGHT FEDERAL BUILDING

Advices from the National Capital indicate the chances for the passage of the bill appropriating $75,000 for the purchase of a site and the erection of a federal building at Oregon City are anything but bright.

In a communication received Tuesday from Congressman Hatley, that gentleman says the Democratic majority in the House of Representatives has outcaused against a Public Grounds and Building bill and as a result all of the appropriation measures passed by the Senate for public buildings may die in the House.

With a Congressional election coming on this year, the Democrats have evidently concluded to practice economy in spots, with the probable result that Oregon City will be in very much the same unenviable position as at the beginning of the session.

If the House fails to act on the Senate bill providing for a federal building here, that measure will expire with the present congress and all of the hard work of the last few months will go for naught.

PORTLAND AGAIN LOSSES FIRST GAME

LOS ANGELES, April 2.—(Special) Portland just couldn't get away from the opening day fiasco, and consequently lost the first game of the season. The score was 4 to 2. Henderson allowed nine hits and Levern seven. The Angels scored in the first on a single by Daly, Page sacrificing him to second and Heitmuller driving out a hit.

In the fourth Kruser doubled and Bapps singled scoring the former. Portland scored again in the sixth, Chadbourne reaching second on an error and Rogers driving a hot one past second. In the fifth Reams doubled, Leverniz bunted to Henderson who threw to Lindsay retiring Reams. Daly tripled, scoring Leverniz. Page tripled scoring Heitmuller fast. Dillon scored, scoring Page. Dillon on stealing, Howley to Bancroft. Three runs.

Fortunes in Faces.

There's often much truth in the saying "her face is her fortune," but it never said where pimples, skin eruptions, blotches, or other blemishes distinguish it. Impure blood is back of them all, and shows the need of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They promote health and beauty. Try them. 25 cents at all druggists.
