

OLYMPIC GAMES WILL BE GREAT

Contests in Sweden Promise to Overshadow Those in London.

AMERICA WILL BE STRONG.

Although the United States Has Lost Many Cracks Since the Last International Meet, There Are a Number of New Men in Line.

Great as were the Olympic games at London in 1908, far surpassing anything the world had seen in the athletic line, the battle of the champions in Stockholm in July promises to overshadow them completely.

The huge stadium, more than 1,000 feet long and 700 feet wide, built to accommodate a crowd of 75,000 persons, in which the games will be held, dwarfs into insignificance in everything except beauty the one at Athens.

Every contest in the 1912 games will be worth going miles to see. Sport followers in this country are bemoaning the turn of the wheel that prevents them from seeing America's brawny brood of red blooded sons vanquish the flower of the world's athletes in the great games.

There is many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip, however, and to those who have been watching the tremendous interest that has been shown in athletics in the different countries since the revival of the games in 1906, with the resultant improvement, it looks as if the meet will not be so much of a cake-walk for America as were the 1908 games.

A few years ago England, Australia and Sweden were America's greatest rivals, but such will not be the case at Stockholm. The athletes who will represent other nations are accustomed to the climate and they will not have to make long journeys to reach the battle ground.

At all previous meetings in which our athletes have met the Britons in the quarter, half and mile runs, America's chances have been long ones at the best, but with the great group of middle distance runners which will be available for the 1912 team there may be a different story to tell next summer.

In order to muster the strongest team possible the American Olympic committee is losing no time in making arrangements for the trials which will be held in different sections of the country on the second Saturday in June.

Although our ranks will be depleted by the loss of veterans who were factors in the Athens and London games, so many athletes have been developed in the last two years who have registered record breaking performances that it only is reasonable to believe that the 1912 team will be every bit as strong as former aggregations.
