STEAMER FOR OREGON CITY TRADE LAUNCHED

Without any formal christening or ceremonies the steamer Grahamona was launched at the ship yards of Joseph Supple in Portland Wednesday afternoon, only the employes of the yards and a few invited guests being present. The launching was without the semblance of delay or accident and when the stays were jacked up and the boat slipped into the water on its seven keels and those aboard were not even shaken by the side entrance of the boat into the water. The Grahamona is owned by the Oregon City Transportation Company which has been in the business of running steamers up the Willamette for many years, first only to Oregon City, later further up river to maintain a regular daily service between Portland and Corvallis with the Grahamona, in connection with their other steamers Pomona and Orsona.

The new steamer is by far the best boat on the upper river run with a passenger accommodation 413 and a crew of 20 and fitted in every way with a high class river boat. She is 155 feet in length, 30 feet beam and 1.6 feet depth and will carry 300 tons of freight on a 3 foot draft. Her engines are 13 by 6 feet stroke and her boilers will develop 700 horse power, the speed being estimated at 15 miles an hour. Her wheel is 17.2 feet in diameter and 18 feet wide, which explains her power and speed for such light draft. The cost is approximately $20,000, without fittings and will represent a cost of $35,000 when she starts on her first run.

Captain A. W. Graham will be her first master, but it is intended that Captain Clyde Rabbin will be in permanent command.

MADMAN DIVES TO DEATH UNDER TRAIN

BODY LITERALLY CUT TO PIECES

Parkplace Suicide Unidentified, Coroner Wilson Will Have Remains Buried Today—Several See Tragedy

An unidentified man committed suicide by jumping in front of a fast Southern Pacific passenger train between this city and Parkplace Tuesday afternoon. He evidently was demented. Coroner Wilson, who had the body brought to this city, was unable to find any letters in the man's pockets or any thing else that would lead to his identification. He was fairly well dressed, and is believed to have been about forty years of age.

Glen Hammond, of Parkplace, who witnessed the tragedy, says he is confident the man was mentally unbalanced. Hammond, who was coming to this city, met the stranger on the railroad track. The man cursed Hammond and wanted to fight. Hammond argued with the man but would not avail himself of the opportunity. The fellow finally caught Hammond by the arm and tried to push him off the track. Apparently well satisfied with what he had done the man started toward Parkplace, and at the intersection of the county road and the railway track he came upon Louis Himler, Clayton Pierce and Emilie Schatz, who were in a wagon. He stopped them and demanded that one get out and fight him. His request was not granted and he started back along the track toward Oregon City. Soon the train came along and while Hammond, Himler, Pierce and Schatz were looking on the stranger raised both arms above his head, and mumbled, "Well, they won't fight me; I can't die. Well, they will and I will die under the locomotive. His body was badly mangled. Inasmuch as there is no way of learning the man's identity Coroner Wilson has decided to bury the body today.

The suicide wore three suits of underwear, and two suits of clothing. Coroner Wilson said he was certain the man had not been drinking. Engineer Montgomery stopped the train almost immediately after it struck the madman and he and Conductor Gregory assisted in extracting the body from beneath the trucks of the engine, where it was wedged.
