

WILL M'FARLAND REALLY QUIT?

Lightweight's Reasons For Retirement Not Convincing.

SAYS HE HAS MADE HIS PILE.

But Even a Plutocrat May Yearn For More Money—The Call of the Ring May Bring Him Back—Mike Murphy About Through—Rosa Ford.

By TOMMY CLARK. The reasons given by Packer McFarland, the Chicago lightweight, for his proposed retirement are not entirely convincing when judged by ordinary standards. McFarland states that he has all the money he wants—some $200,000—and finds training too much of a hardship. Few persons, he says, are pugilists or otherwise, are satisfied with the state of their bank accounts. As for training being a hardship, most healthy athletes find pleasure in keeping themselves in good condition. McFarland never has to work very hard to get in shape for a bout. He does not take on fat as some do and does not torture himself in order to remove it. A few days of light work in the gymnasium and a little road work render him fit for the hardest contest.

In a story written under his own signature McFarland states that a boxer must often go without water when drying out in order to reach a low notch. However, he can hardly apply this to his own case, as he seldom makes weight and never boxes at the lightweight limit. He can obtain all the water he cares to take on without ever being compelled to reduce a pound, as he has no championship to defend. It may be that McFarland is feeling a little discouraged by the prospect of at least one hard match that is inevitable if he wishes to retain his standing. He has always been a most careful matchmaker, not given to taking chances of any kind. But even if he does retire for a time there is small chance of its being permanent. He has just turned twenty-four years old and is still in his prime. It is always the case that a boxer once having occupied a prominent position in the public eye finds it next to impossible to drop out of sight with his own consent. The call of the ring is strong, and McFarland, like the others who tried to retire gracefully while still successful, will answer it as they have done unless he is made of entirely different clay.

Friends of Mike Murphy, the veteran of the University of Pennsylvania, are much worried about his condition. It is said that a trip to some western resort, probably Denver, is the best thing for the man who has developed more athletes than any other individual. At first it was thought

That California would be the best place for him, but Dr. White and other members of the university faculty suggested the higher and drier climate of Colorado. It is feared that Murphy will not be on hand to coach the Pennsylvania university track team next spring.

Probably no member of the pitching profession ever achieved such a dizzy career of ups and downs as that now exclusively possessed by Rosa Ford, the New York Americans' star pitcher. In 1910 Ford led his league in victories with twenty-six wins against six defeats. In 1911, with his club in sixth place, he was still around the turn, with twenty
