A Good Scheme

A Woman's Perception Was Required to Defeat It

By EDWARD C. LONG

There are a number of problems bere the counterfeiter," said my friend therts, the detective, "but the most operant of all is distributing the bills after they are made. There's more room for ingenuity in this part of the unit than may other, and more counterfellors are tracked from this ciew than any other. All sorts of devices are removed to to get the stoff in circulation. Persons are roped in by being offered an enormous price for something they even, and when they get that pay and that the money they have received is counterfelt. In such cases the transaction is usually large, and when it is completed the rascals happens without leaving any trace. of methods whereby the bills are put timostily a case that fell into my funds a few years ago is about the feet example I ever met with

I must sent to a banker who had reported some five dollar bill counterfeits on his hank's circulation *Every now and again a lot of these bills would appear, be absorbed and after awhite another tot would find their way into the hands principally of shopkerrers. The only clew that anybudy had was this. An old man one day some man is drug story and, after

"One day I received notice that a ment store, another at a newsetand and still another at a hardware store. Indeal, the reports of the passing of these bills come in from all over the city. One of the persons on whom they were passed and submitted to be vicfinized in order to catch the perpetrafor. Not being sure that the bill was tounterfeit, he first pursued the same course as that pursued by the drug clerk. The person who had offered the bill was a woman. She had been folloved; and the horse she entered was watched. But she was not seen unkhig an exit, nor did she ever again appear to the watcher or any one else

When I had cathered these addle Hernid. fional facts I feet sure that I had met with conditions that would be very difficult to unravel. And yet it appearof that more than one person was enthe more persons possessing a secret the more difficult it is to keep it.

I tabled to her about it a good deal, but 1912. did not contine myself to it exclusive She was much pleased to be conwillfed by a detective, and I encouraged her to help me. She said that about once in two weeks the man opposite saiffed forth as though be was intending to accomplish something. She had noticed this because at other times when no went out he did so natlessly and as though time hung heavily up his hands. I naked her to let me know the next time she saw him go out in an energetic mood and try to notify me to time to comble me to for low him.
