STAFFORD.

The weather, which has been variable since the new year, first made its appearance, settled down warm and smiling on Tuesday, the 4th, no doubt owing to the change in the administration. Although a few heavy colds were felt in the shape of Oregon mist as the sun went down to mark the passing of the power that was as we about with the men of old, "The King is dead, Long Live the King."

The entire neighborhood was shocked to hear of the death last Thursday of Louise Nemie. He had been at the Oregon City hospital for the past five weeks, suffering with typhoid fever, a complication of diseases set in at the last which his system was too far reduced to resist. He was buried from the Catholic church on Sunday, March 2nd, and nearly all of Stafford and vicinity followed him to his last resting place in the beautiful Catholic cemetery just out of town. Many and beautiful were the floral pieces which were heaped upon his grave, among them an anchor sent by the school children, a pillow by his young friends, a beautiful piece to brother from his sorrowing brother and two sisters, and numerous offerings by individual friends and neighbors, all of which seemed to be comforting to his bereaved mother. He was born in Butler County, Nebraska, on July 4th, 1894. He came with his parents to Oregon 12 years ago, and to Stafford 11 years ago, most of his childhood and all of his young manhood had been spent on the farm his mother still owns. He was of a kindly disposition, and had many friends among both old and young, and leaves to mourn his loss a mother, one brother, Jess, who is at present at home with his mother

MACKSBURG.

While our eastern friends are enjoying the glowing anthracite, we are sitting with open windows and doors to admit the genial spring atmosphere, the melody of the songbirds and the fragrance of newlyplowed ground. Their lawns are still barred under fertilizing material to protect them from the late wintry cold and their rose bushes, in the same precaution, are still in their coats of straw. Our grass is of the loveliest green and our roses are putting out their buds. Not only in the plant world but everywhere about us is the thrill of activity. The atmosphere seems alive with work, as it must be to keep pace with the rapid advance of the season. Every ranchman feels the necessity of haste, knowing that the planting time will soon be here, and almost every one is planning to have more ground under culture than ever before. There are innumerable stumps and tree trunks in the way now, but they are fast giving way before the resistless power of the stumping machine, added to the still greater force of dynamite, and now comes the news that two thousand men are to be recruited for work on the Portland, Eugene and Eastern railroad.

Poultry Fencing

One Or Two Generations Ago Most Farm Animals Roamed At Large But We Have Gradually Found That This Did Not Pay

The barn yard fowls have been the last to feel the effects of business methods on the farm but at last they have to get in their place (in the poultry yard) and stay there. The farmer who reads the magazines knows that today many a chicken farm of a few acres pays a bigger profit than a big farm did a few years ago. Every farmer keeps chickens because it pays and it will pay lots better and the farm will look better if they are kept in the poultry yard.

They are about the most profitable animals on the farm and it takes less space and less expense to keep them.

Enough of our poultry fencing to keep your fowls properly will cost very little and will be the best investment you ever made on the farm. Ask for prices.
