Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

A YOUNG PATRIOT. Dear Mr. President Taft—I am the little boy who you waved at when you were in Marshall, Tex., and I waved back at you. I never will forget how you looked. You are the only president I have ever seen. I am seven years old. I live with my grandma. My little mother went to heaven when I was fifteen days old. I have no brothers nor sisters. I would like to get a letter from you written with your own dear hand. I hope that you will not disappoint me. I know the names of all the presidents and the year in which they served our country. With best wishes for your future, I am sincerely yours, GEORGE LANE CORELY, Honey Grove, Tex.

The above touching letter was received by Mr. Taft at the White House only a few weeks before he was scheduled to leave office. Needless to say, the lad had his wish, for he received not only a letter written by the president's own hand, but an autographed photo. The boy's letter will be kept among the Taft mementos.

There is one thing in the childish mischievous that should be taken to heart by every boy in the land. Although but seven, he knows the names of all our presidents and the years of their inauguration. Probably he also knows other things about them.

There could be no more helpful or inspiring study to any boy than that of the lives of our presidents.

In nearly every case these presidents were themselves poor boys who won their way to our highest office by sheer merit—ability, honor, service to their country.

They were all good men. After the clouds of partisan passion have cleared away we can see this. No country in history ever had a line of executives whose character was so uniformly high and unblemished.

Moreover, some of them were very great men.

Washington and Lincoln compare favorably with the greatest figures of any time or clime.

There are others of the second rank, but little behind these—Jefferson and Jackson, Grant, Cleveland, McKinley and others. Of those yet living there is too much difference of opinion and partisan heat for them now to be given their true rank. But history will assign them their places.

Of all the twenty-six who have held this lofty post one thing can be said that should give us infinite pride: There has never been a stain on their personal honor.

Their home lives have been clean. They have been free from scandal. If you would learn patriotism, if you would discover the road to success, study the lives of our presidents.

Romantic. "Ever get an egg with a girl's name written on it?" "No, but this may be an incipient romance. There's a snazzy print on this piece of pie."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

WHAT A CRACK DID

By SADIE OLCOTT

Bernard Ellsworth, the only son of wealthy parents, and Susie Pixley were playmates. When they grew up Bernard went to another field for awhile and during his absence corresponded with Susie. Whether or no it was absence, he discovered that he wanted her. Her parents were in rather straitened circumstances at the time, and this caused the young man to think that the question between him and Susie was, should he, who would inherit wealth, marry a girl who had not even prospects? He wanted her badly enough to make the pecuniary sacrifice, but considered that Susie, under the circumstances, should feel highly flattered.

Before his return he wrote her a long letter which he considered contained a lot of good sense, ending with a proposition of marriage. When the postman handed it to a maid, who left it on a mantel with a crack in it, and perhaps it was the modesty natural to a love letter—it slipped down into the crack out of sight. When Susie came in the maid told her that a letter had come for her, and she was going to get it when fate stepped in to play one of those tricks so common in the affairs of man and woman kind. There came a ring at the telephone, followed by a summons for Susie. The summons kept her away all night, and the next day her little brother was taken very ill, so that the matter slipped her mind.

When Bernard returned he did not go to see her, and when she learned that he had been at home a week without calling she was surprised. It did not seem that there was anything to do in the matter. She was unconscious of having done anything to offend him and, being sensitive, fancied that he might have met his fate while away and thought it best to break off all intimacies with other girls. Perhaps she would meet him and the matter would be explained.

But that fate which had started the misunderstanding kept it up. A number of times Bernard and Susie were within a hundred feet of each other without coming in contact. Once she saw him crossing a street, but since he was not facing her he did not see her or, if he did, pretended he didn't. They were under the same roof at social gatherings twice, but the little tap that fate set to keeping them apart contrived that they should not be in the same room at the same moment.

Then one morning Susie took up a newspaper to see under large headlines a notice of the failure of the Ellsworth company, incorporated, of which Bernard's father was president and owner of the majority of the stock.

The day after this announcement Bernard, who was sunk in despondency consequent upon the family misfortune, received a letter from his old friend Susie offering him her sympathy. One would suppose such a letter coming at such a time would be received in the spirit with which it was sent. But Bernard considered himself to have been badly treated—snubbed, in fact—ad receiving no reply to his letter of fering himself, and the epistle he now received seemed to be adding insult to injury. He tossed it in a wastebasket without reply.

Then fate, still bent on playing its little game, brought about another element to complicate matters. Susie and her father, who had long been keeping his family in straitened circumstances by trying to market inventions, succeeded in getting capital for the production of an electrical machine which made every one even remotely connected with it rich. Mr. Pixley had secured a nice block of the stock in payment for organizing the company, and it became a fortune.

But one thing prevented Susie from being happy in her family's altered fortune. She would have liked to make her old friend Bernard happy in some pecuniary way that was rather vague in her inexperienced mind.

Then fate, having got the matter into as bad a snarl as possible and having turned things completely upside down, instructed its tap to undo everything that had been done. The house the Pixleys lived in was very much run down and it was decided to make the necessary repairs and improvements. One morning when mechanics were tearing everything to pieces a workman who had just pulled down a mantel handed Susie a letter. She recognized Bernard Ellsworth's handwriting and at once opened it. Since it was a long epistle she took it to a portion of the house that had not yet been disturbed and read it.

What a mess had been made by a bit of a crack behind a mantel! And why should it have required a tearing up of the house to straighten the matter out? Why hadn't Bernard told her what he had done and what she had not done? But, on the other hand, why had she not made inquiries of him as to what was the trouble? Then a flush of pleasure came to her at remembering that when that letter was written Bernard was rich and she was poor, while now the conditions were reversed.

The next morning young Ellsworth received a reply to an offer of marriage made a long while before, explaining the delay and accepting the proposition. There was nothing for him to do but abide by his offer, which he was very much pleased to do.

That fate went off to attend to other odd schemes.

Pat's Remedy. Irish wit is a well head that has never been known to run dry. Pat Maguire had been misbehaving and appeared before his commanding officer charged for the third time with drunkenness.

"Thy if 'twill make a '3' any silder, sorr," he suggested in a persuasive whisper.

Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was forced for others and I used several bottles of it with the result that I haven't been bothered with my side since then. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation, but my husband thought I had better write to you and I did so, stating my symptoms. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Cary, Maine.

Advertisement for The Overland car, featuring a large illustration of the car and the text: "See the Picture of the Car the price puzzles You; Read the description the price astonishes You; Drive the Car the price delights You; The Overland"

As handsome a car as the most exacting buyer could desire. From cooler to tail-light impressive, every line indicating fleetness and power, eloquent of comfort and pleasure, built with faithful regard to genuine quality, correct, invulnerable in every mechanical detail, the best in its class that American skill can produce and money can buy.

That is the Overland. They don't build only 5,000 of them; nor even 10,000. If they produced no more than that number of cars, they too, would have to ask at least $1300 for the beautiful car we offer at $985 F. O. B. Toledo.

They build 40,000 cars this season. They contract for the raw material for this enormous production at one time, pay for it in cash, and thereby secure the best the markets afford, at the lowest prices.

The price includes everything needed for comfortable touring; acetylene engine starter, gas tank, gas and oil lamps, genuine mohair top and top covering, clear vision, rain-vision windshield, Warner speedometer, horn, robe-rail, foot-rest, tire carriers in the rear of the car, etc.

The Overland motor is the best of its type. Some motors—this is an important point—have three main bearings, some only two. Overland motors have five large main bearings; that's one of the reasons why they work without trouble. The whole motor is built for power and endurance.

The Overland model 69 rear axle is of a new and improved type, three-quarter floating; this axle system has all the advantages of the full-floating axle, but none of the shortcomings of the semi-floating axle usually found in cars of moderate price.

The brakes are of new design, overlaid, gradual but powerful in application. They will hold the car anywhere.

In Overland cars the transmission is combined with the rear axle and the drive is in a straight line. Both these features make for saving of engine power and smooth and quiet running.

Come and take a look at it. Compare it with others. Take a ride in the big, fully equipped Overland; it involves no obligation on your part. Then draw your own conclusions. That's all.
